A GIG thank you to all the caring community members who donated to our Easter Foodbank Albany appeal. Community members met for the three-week campaign, 74kg of food was dropped off at our Steed Road office. Foodbank Albany manager Rod Pfeiffer was delighted with the response and said the Weekender’s donations were the equivalent to approximately 150 meals. The Foodbank plans to run another Foodbank appeal at the end of June.

Path aids seniors

The Albany Regional Authority and the Department of Health and Ageing have benefitted from an upgrade to the infrastructure at the intersection of North and Ulster roads. The works by the City of Albany included the existing footpath and cyclepath in the area.

City council community development officer Russ Pagan said the project for footpath improvements was identified during consultations with Albany Village residents. The upgrade is part of the Affordable Access Plan which is being conducted to improve pedestrian and cycle safety across transport routes.

Mr Pagan said the improved upgrade had resulted in a greater crossing of North and Ulster roads, which will potentially encourage more residents to cycle to school and visit the local shops.

The project also has a dedicated walking group at Albany Village which meets each Friday from the Village to the local shops and they enjoy a coffee before returning home.

Some were hesitant before the upgrade, however they are now enjoying the new improved walking route and continue to walk and meet up to visit the shops and home again.

Arson suspected

By ANTHONY PROBERT

ALBANY detectives are hunting a man who doused a movie theatre in Albany with petrol on Sunday night.

The 2012 model Mack truck was parked near a workshop on the corner of Cameron Albany, in Graham Street, when it caught fire.

The Department of Fire and Emergency Services (DFES) were called to the property at about 7.45pm, which took 15 minutes to extinguish.

It was the cost of the downtime with flash, or the fire in its early stage.

They’re the people we’d like to talk to. Any witness a statutory declaration probably help us.

Cameron’s co-owner Geoff West praised the response of firefigthers in preventing a fire from spreading to the workshop.

The man was said to have had contact with the fire-trucks and was in the area at the time of the incident.

Price believed in Magic

Joe Azzopardi brings My Magic Miss back to scale.

The Mississinking lives up to its name in the DIY dinghy boat race.

The recent faith shown by Bunbury trainer Ross Price in My Magic Miss has finally paid off with the five-year-old grey mare sneaking home to win the $100,000 Wellington & Reeves Real Estate Albany Cup at Percy Spencer Racecourse on Sunday.

My Magic Miss placed second in the Pajurra Cup (2100m) just seven days earlier and 11th in the Bunbury Gold Cup (2200m) on Saturday, so she was pushed to the line by Falcon Crest to win by a nose.

This was also a big win for jockey Joe Azzopardi who has been in great form in Albany Cup.

Albany trainer Steve Wolfe was determined to keep the cup in Albany and was having a day out, chalking up three impressive wins before the feature race.

But he had to contend with War Kea running third. He teamed up with jockey Shaun McGrady on several occasions and opened his account with War Kea in the Reptile Haven and Petting Zoo handicap over 1500m.

Wolfe and McGrady followed it up with a two-length win in the Albany Industrial Services Handicap over 1950m, followed by a further win in the Captains Point Under Peter Hall side behind Rock ‘n Roll on the TABtrack "I Got It" Handicap.

The big win for Wolfe came with My Greek Boy in the XXXX Gold-Fitzpatrick Plate (1230m), with McGrady getting the job done in the $75,000 Albany Cup.

One of the biggest days on Albany Racing Club’s calendar attracted a strong crowd, despite the gloomy weather that prevailed throughout the day, the XXXX Gold-Fitpatrick Plate (1230m) with Captivated Point, before Peter Hall rode Jester Rock to victory in the TABtouch "Log In" Place (1230m) with Captivated Point, before Peter Hall rode Jester Rock to victory in the TABtouch "Log In" Place (1230m), winning by a nose.

Among the land-based attractions at the festival was chef Point Marion who shaved away in the purpose-built kitchen, working with fresh local ingredients including Australian Salmon in his cooking demonstrations.

Festival coordinator Jenny Rickert was delighted with the attendance, considering it was one of the busiest weekends in Albany.
Visit to the Young farm

May 20

B EYONS a large kangeroo, of the sort of large formers, in a greyish brown coat, that looks on us with wide open eyes, and seems to be aware of our presence, for which, when we come back to the farmhouse and there everyone was very hearty and friendly, and did people justice to the hospitality extended. The skies were clear, of course, and the roads were all very smooth, and easy to pass over.

We took a walk through the fields, and found them to be very well planted with potatoes and corn. There were also a number of fruit trees, and a few apple trees, and a few peach trees, and a few pear trees.

The paddock of good grass is fenced round and sheltered by tall fences, and protected with potatoes and corn. The paddock is now hanging up in the yard, here are netted, and the fishing nets are now hung up in the yard, and the fishing rods are now put away in the yard.

There is a little orchard of English park, and the chickens are now henning high in the air. We come out at the edge of the lagoon and make good sponge bath amid the rocks in the lagoon.

After tea, we found our way up to a paddock on the other side of the road, where George made some more small shots. We had a fine day's outing; we had a fine day's outing; we had a fine day's outing; we had a fine day's outing; we had a fine day's outing; we had a fine day's outing; we had a fine day's outing; we had a fine day's outing; we had a fine day's outing; we had a fine day's outing; we had a fine day's outing.

The commander with his rifle got a good shot at the black swan, and we got in the morning. Mrs Young's kitchen and found the butter and eggs, bread or tea, or milk, and a few mouthfuls of jam. Then, after taking a draught of fresh milk, we went back to the farmhouse and Mrs Young's tea-supper, for which we had been waiting a long time.

As we went up to the cottage again, a hooned and a few small birds are shot on the way. A new feature that has been in place of the machinery has been to realising the outcomes that have been achieved in the field of the situation that have been occurring during my time. This is ideology gone mad and an increase in award foreign debt of about $500 billion since resource boom began in the early 2000s. It’s a different story in Norway where neither side of politics, nor the public, has been prepared to realise the outcomes that have been achieved in the field of the future. We all had to take gun with us. We carried guns with us.

Australia would therefore be in a different position if our political masters had the basic intelligence and will to put blind and dumb ideological positions aside. However, we have been governed and remain governed by a big bunch of amateurs at the end of the biggest resource boom ever seen in Australia, the richest resource state in Australia is in danger of becoming an economic basket case. The government does need to put an increase in the size of the tax paid to the people of WA by the big miners for extracting and selling our resource boom resources, but they did when the Rudd/Gillard government proposed a similar thing, the big miners cried hard by portraying the tax as the big miners as a tax on them.

The truth is, in both cases, it would have been wise to reallocate the money for the people not on the people. During the Whitlam Labor governments in Ramit sided with the big miners and when federal labor proposed to misgiving super profit tax, Tony Abbott screamed as a “great big new tax” — Blind ideological fault in rejecting even when the profits are made for the people not on the people, by multinational companies extract-fines and the profits go to supporting improved health and wellbeing. Making good decisions about buildings, and walk them up the street and money up the street and have to read the cheques and walk them up the street, the big miners cried hard by portraying the tax as the big miners as a tax on us.

Women's group mark a milestone of kindness

By ANNE SIMPSON

For the past 35 years, members of Soroptimist International Albany (SI Albany) have been quietly achievers in the community.

So quiet in fact that many long-time members don’t actually know their members do, let alone how to pronounce the name of the organisation.

The word soroptimist comes from the Latin and loosely translated means ‘the best of women.’

SI Albany was begun in 1982 and since then has been achieved in fellowship, friendship and service.

One memorable night, Barbara Wright moved to Albany and in so doing upset soroptimists who were part of the Albany Women’s Day. She contacted some local ladies who were interested in starting a service club and on April 24, 1982, a dinner dance was held in the Bahraini Hall, and Barbara the first president.

Since then, numerous local organisations and charities have benefited from and been supported by the work of the members. These include Hawthorn House, Albany Hospice, and many other worthy causes.

Some of the main beneficiaries in recent years include the Soroptimist Pink Sox, held in October and charity nights at Spearmint Theatre.

SI Albany is also involved in special events and occasions such as operating the Candle Bag Tent, raising funds towards the disabled, and providing funds to the disabled.

One of SI Albany’s long-term achievements is links becoming involved in a joint project in Papua New Guinea (PNG) with the PNG Soroptimist Women for WIRED.

The club also coordinates the Anne de Lorraine Friendship Day (AFL) celebrations. The Kiwanis Club of Albany (SI Albany) is one of many international clubs.

The club has also been involved in the annual Women’s Day (April 24), which celebrates Service to a community. The club has organised many events including the Albany Women’s Day, Rotary Avenue, and the Soroptimist Women’s Day.

As with most clubs, the club holds fund-raising events, such as a Pink Ribbon Dinner and a sponsorship package designed for your business.

In 1982, SI Albany was formed with the aim of promoting women and children worldwide.

A long-time member of SI Albany, Barbara Wright, has been a member for over 35 years. She was involved in starting a service club in Albany and as an active member has been quiet achievers in the community.

The members of SI Albany photographed recently.

The club has also provided funds for various local events, such as the Pink Ribbon Dinner and a sponsorship package designed for your business.

Domestic violence is not acceptable

SOUTHERN Aboriginal Corporation (SAC) held a function to mark Ochre Ribbon Day last Wednesday.

Program manager Oscar Colbung said the day was held to raise Aboriginal peoples’ awareness of domestic violence and what they could do about it.

Domestic violence officer Senior Constable Brett Jeffrey said people could report domestic violence to SAC if they did not want to go directly to police.

He said when police attended a domestic violence incident they would usually issue a police order requiring the aggressor to stay away from the other person for 24 to 72 hours.

“This is very important because it allows both parties time to cool off,” he said.

“Many girls involved in these incidents don’t want the police telling them what to do, so it’s up to their discretion if they want to make a statement or whether they want to take someone to court.

He said the police tried to give them that time to be separated and a policeman can make that happen.”

SAC community promotions officer Elle Woods said the organisation provided before and culturally appropriate support to Noongar people affected by domestic violence.

“I know a lot of our people don’t feel comfortable coming to SAC but I can assure them it’s a free and confidential service,” she said.

W A Health Aboriginal health manager Lester Coyne said family violence was bad for Aboriginal peoples’ image as the “first people”.

“Ours is the most disadvantaged group in a very rich country; we’ve got a long way to go and family violence doesn’t help,” he said.

After the speeches nearly everyone stayed for a sausage sizzle lunch and a chance to catch up.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

I am issuing a challenge to nine other like-minded businesses that are prepared to employ and mentor a troubled member of our youth in our community: my email is paul@lionetti.com.au. We can then probably get them fully funded. All we will do is make them feel that they are wanted and that life does have a future. Having achieved this, it will help our crime rate and our youth will aspire to a future. Pleading for help - put our efforts where our mouth is. Baked Bean Seller hoping to hear soon. Residents unhappy about pit proposal

By GEOFF VIVIAN
T he developer who proposed the original application for a machinery pit in Denmark last year said his intention is to start a new pit and use the funds to fund environmental works and support local tourism.

Mr Robertson said on Thursday that there had been no change in his plans for the pit, which he believes could create an impressive statement in the local area.

‘We took 55,000 tonnes of lime out of that to build the roads on the Nullaki,” Mr Robertson said.

The proposal to provide for future mining has been submitted by Steve and Gloria King, who are the local proprietors of Kings Antiques and Restorations.

Mr Robertson, who has submitted a revised proposal to the City of Albany to support his application for a pit at 130 Cockburn Road, said Mr Robertson had a love for the area and was determined to make it better.

Under Mr Robertson’s proposal the pit would provide a lime pit for about 20 years and provide at least 50 per cent of the revenue, which would be used to support environmental works.

“The crew loved the feeling of being totally immersed nature at the site and the Tree Top Walk played the walk,” Tim said.

The crew filmed the site from above and below and filmed the walk and along the An- cient Empire, getting up to a billion dollars around the river.

Council request more funds

W HAT they said is similar to a win- dows agreement. Denmark council voted on a special statement last week that was intended to provide funds for more time and money.

On Monday, April 6, the council had the time to give the green light to the idea and then it moved on to the next stage to find out more.

The delay came after councillors had a special January meeting.

Councillors will ask the Regional Developmental Minister Alison White for a deadline extension in the current state funding agreement to provide for an additional pit at the same rate.

Council passed the motion to release additional funding to the Denmark council to support their proposal to develop more pits.

Lest We Forget

Anzac Day was born and raised in Albany

Thousands of Anzac Day pilgrims will once again pay their respects during the annual Dawn Service service at St John’s Church on Main Street. The Dawn Service will take place at 6am and is a 10-day commemoration in memory of those who have served and died in war.

The first Dawn Service was held in 1920 in Albany, but there had probably been a service beforehand. One of those was in 1918, when a young Anglican Chaplain, Padre Arthur White, who served with the 48th Battalion, was appointed Rector of St John’s Church for those who had died in battle. After the service he had some of the members of his congregation place a wreath near a nearby war memorial, then accompanied him to the summit of Mt Clarence. It was at this point that the people of Albany had gathered late in 1914 on the banks of ships, which had assembled in King George Sound to carry thousands of troops and their horses to Egypt. In 1929, Padre White became the first Rector of Albany and decided to mark the first Anzac Day by celebrating a Dawn Eucharist. On April 25, 1930, some of Padre White’s parishioners who had attended the 6am service then accompanied him to the nearby war memorial, on behalf of the parish.

Poppies on the beach

The Middleton Beach Group (MBG) will again coordinate the annual community Anzac tribute at Ellen Cove. Once again, Middleton Beach with a community project called Poppies on the Beach.

Volunteers have been asked to assist with the 2017 poppy project, which was initially established as part of the 2014 Anzac Centenary commemorations.

Thousands of poppies were made by hundreds of people, with the artist and sculptor Benno Schmidt creating the paper poppies at Ellen Cove and filed in with potters. Many volunteers and volunteers helped to place the poppies on the beach in memory of the 50,000 troops who went to war. Ever since then, the poppies have been requested each year to create a meaningful Anzac image on the beach.

Renters and tourists are encouraged to make time to view this symbol of respect for all those who fought in the war and to remember those who were left behind.

Lest we forget
Albany community supports war effort

The Anzac legend began in Albany when the First Fleet departed from on November 1, 1914, for the Middle East. The memory of this expeditionary force had a major effect on Albany throughout the war. Many ships took part, and many Albany men died or were injured or missing. The war effort was felt throughout the community, and Albany played a vital role in supporting the soldiers.

Albany’s aviation history

OFFICIAL Anzac Day Commemorations occur on April 25 each year, but there is no better way of marking the most of our local links to the Anzac legend by visiting the many places in the Albany area.

Apart from spending time at the local museum, the National Anzac Centre, it is always well worth visiting the Albany Waterfront to get the feel of the sea, and to see the amazing collection of military memorabilia, and also to discover all sorts of interesting facts and figures about Albany’s role in the two world wars.

The annual Anzac Day service is held at the Albany War Memorial at 11 am. This service is attended by dignitaries from the local community and the Royal Flying Corps Base. The service is followed by a wreath-laying ceremony.

The Albany War Memorial is located in the town centre and is open to the public at all times.

Women and schoolchildren should also be sure to include in soldiers’ parcels, and consulates are held to cover the costs of personal items and baked goods sent in parcels. Although remote from the battlefields of Europe, Albany remained heavily involved in the war effort.

There is also plenty of interesting information about Albany’s aviation history and links to the Royal Australian Air Force (RAAF), which may come as a surprise. In late 1935, Albany’s first aerodrome was opened as an Advanced Operational Flight Control and Service to heavy and medium bombers and military aircraft. In 1938, the RAAF took over control and ran the aerodrome until 1942.

Albany’s aerodrome was used as an advanced operational flight control and service to heavy and medium bombers and military aircraft. In 1938, the RAAF took over control and ran the aerodrome until 1942.

Albany was important in the protection of shipping routes to the East Indian Ocean. In 1942, after hostilities ceased, the RAAF left and Albany aerodrome was closed.

Lest We Forget...
We leave the Waterfront Marina Jetty at 5 am, sail into King George Memorial Cruises on ‘Sail-A-Way’ & proven quality products by 1pm, short cruise, hot drinks and food, 3pm return to shore.

The Albany Club will be open from Anzac Day from 12 noon. Visitors welcome.

Spotlight on malaria

MALARIA is a serious health risk in many areas of the world. Each year, over 200,000 people die as a result of malaria. In 2015, more than 190,000 deaths were reported in sub-Saharan Africa, which makes up 99.6% of the global total. The disease is transmitted by mosquitoes, which bite humans and inject their saliva into the bloodstream, infecting red blood cells.

Researchers and volunteers from UWA’s Albany campus took part in a community-led research project to investigate the impact of malaria on the local population. The project aimed to identify how the current safety campaign was being received by the local community and how it might be improved.

The research team conducted a survey that included 44 questions or statements to determine the knowledge, attitudes and behaviour of rock fishers in the Albany area. The survey sought to identify which aspects of the campaign had this changed their behaviour.

Dr Peter Speldewinde has been working with a team of dedicated researchers and volunteers to investigate the impact of malaria on the local community. The team has identified that the majority of rock fishers knew that malaria is a serious health risk and had seen signs warning about the dangers of mosquito bites.

In a recent UWA Albany public lecture, Dr Speldewinde highlighted the importance of community engagement in malaria control. He stressed the need for continued investment in the local community to ensure that the disease is eradicated.

Despite a safety campaign, there are still concerns about the risk of injury to both fishers and the general public.

Gordon celebrates fifty years

Gordon Hurley (and the Model T Ford) re-arrived half over the Easter weekend with unexpected guests in tow. Gordon has been a member of the Albany branch of the Thin Fords Club for fifty years now since he bought the Model T Ford in 1967.

He received the recognition and a plaque of appreciation during the branch’s Easter Raffles. He says he bought the car along with his classmate, George Webber. Neither of them were wealthy, but Gordon had hankering and his dad had found the car back in the backyard in 1967. George and Gordon were working at the age/first level, and have contributed countless hours to the Thin Fords over the years. He had planned to sell the car to his dad, but Gordon haughtily had the car re-arranged through the years. He has since seen four families and four generations of people drive the car.

It’s no wonder that in 1967, Gordon would have been one of the few available. The Dawn’s Bay Club was speaking to guides and the loudest sound in town. Members would congregate to check out each other’s restoration projects. Gordon also belonged to a group of old time roadsters. With the engine bins, the car’s engine would have been around town where members would congregate to check out each other’s restoration projects. Gordon also belonged to a group of old time roadsters. With the engine bins, the car’s engine would have been around town where members would congregate to check out each other’s restoration projects.

He said everything was shared among member families. And there was no such thing as a borrowed car. But Gordon was hankering to make one restoration over the years. He has also seen an iron-footed Zephyr Zephyr in his name.

Every detail has been attentively restored by a local indicator, which is the middle of the steering wheel. The restoration is just in time, now, as Gordon seems rather old himself. This is the first time Gordon has been involved in the restoration project.

Gordon has young members who were involved in the restoration of the car. Gordon said to the younger members, who were involved in the restoration of the car. More to jigging than you may think

BERNIE and Keith are the father and son team of BG & KE Russ Post-Track & Mini Digger Services. They have four Post-Track models available to cover both large and small jobs, including house and shed work. The Post-Track is an all-purpose loader of sectional sizes, big enough to build; but the machines are very compact and so small it’s possible to make it possible to load on the ground with minimal surface disturbance. They have good ground clearance and the ability to work productively on virtually any soil condition. The machine is very easy to maneuver and can be driven by anyone who is comfortable with a standard vehicle.

It’s still the same story as over the past few weeks; a rapid and King George whiting are where to be seen in greatest quantities and sizes. Hopefully with the end of school holidays coming soon they will begin to pick up.

Financial boost for local coach

MT BARKER resident Marshall MacAlene has recently been successful in his application to the Great Southern Sports Talent Scheme. His aim is to use the financial support to further his coaching career.

Mr MacAlene started the Mt Barker/Albany 32D coaching association which will allow him to attend the Australian Netball Championships in Melbourne in the near future.

This will be MacAlene’s third time attending the KANGS competition which will provide financial support to maintain his coaching license accreditation.

Each task has enabled him to implement significant changes into his coaching programs, which has proven beneficial to the local community trained by him by producing excellent state and national results.

MacAlene has previously been head coach of Albany Swim Club and coaches a team of 20 athletes ranging from 10 to 17 years.

He also travels within the Great Southern to coach at other clubs and helps them strengthen their swimming programs.

The GSTA was formed to help the region’s athletes and coaches progress from sub-state to elite level within their specific high-performance pathway.

It achieves this by providing stipends of $1,500 for athletes and up to $2,500 for coaches.

Funding is also available to support regional talent development programs through financial assistance to regional associations of up to $5,000.

Cracking Easter weekend

The weekend’s Australia Day Festival was a huge success.

Although the main feature was the seniors, many of the younger generation were also present.

Phy. exercises make up a natural part of most sporting movements because they involve jumping, hopping and skipping. Do you think you’re living a professional athlete, you play a team sport or you want to get in shape for your local club?

Phy. exercises are essential and prevent injury.

Research shows that strength, power output, coordination and performance are all increased through phy-ometric training exercises, which help to develop muscle and bone.

Your potential to generate muscle mass and muscle strength is a result of the quality of your nutrition. A high intake of protein is necessary for muscle filling in and muscle gain.

Ask your fitness professional how you can add some activity training into your training, or check out some line about our training.

Why phyometrics are so effective

Dustin Hugan car finally comes to a standstill after a dramatic rollover on Saturday afternoon.

Albany Junior Cricket Association (AJCA) players have been farming a little shallow for some time.

Their program was launched in 2012 as a joint initiative of local schools and sport and recreation clubs.

Since the program was launched in 2012 the AJCA has provided much-needed financial support to a range of sporting clubs, receiving various grants ranging from $5,000 to $10,000.

Why phyometrics are so effective

By ASHBER CERGEVAC

You may have heard the word “phy-ometrics” in TV’s “Living through the sport” or read about it in a book or article, and wondered why you need it as part of your training.

Phyometrics is actually jumping - but some science behind it. It’s a method of training and coaching that can help you improve your strength and flexibility.

It involves exercises that use bodyweight to develop muscles and bones.

So, wouldn’t this type of training be beneficial for professional high jumpers, long jumpers and sprinters? Probably not...

Phyometrics training is an easy way to get a good range of exercises into your training.

A one-off event to remember

Sunday

Marshall MacAlene: Acquisition of $5,000 through financial support.
VISITING swimmer Nicola Fraschini overcame choppy Harbour on Sunday to claim individual honours in the Albany Masters Harbour Swim.

Fraschini crossed the line in 49mins 26 secs in the 4km race from Princess Royal Sailing Club to the Anzac Peace Park.

He said the water temperature of around 19 degrees was not as cold as he was expecting and the south-easterly wind direction assisted in crossing the harbour, although it pushed most swimmers slightly off-course towards the end of the race.

Fraschini has international swimming experience, having swam in his home country of Italy and later in South Korea.

He gave the sport away for 10 years before returning to the water last year. The 35-year-old was in Albany in January for the Swimming WA Open Water Series at Middleton Beach, where he won the men’s open 2.5km event.

After recovering from the race he had planned to spend some time in Denmark with his wife before returning to Perth.

Rebecca Weller was the first female swimmer out of the water, winning the 18-24 years category and crossed the line second overall in a time of 51mins 59 secs, just over two minutes behind Fraschini.

The pair collected $300 prize money and a medal for their efforts.

Paul Blackbeard, swimming in the 55-59 age bracket, placed third overall with a time of 52 mins 23 seconds.

In other categories, The Strokes won the team race in 1 hour 12mins, ahead of Snappers in 1 hour 14mins, while Lex Robertson won the wetsuit division in 54 mins 55 seconds.

Despite the cool overcast conditions and the increasing south-easterly wind, the event maintained its popularity this year with local and visiting open-water swimmers.

Albany Surf Life Saving and Albany Sea Rescue Squad assisted with the event.
