Councillors turn back on ‘toxic environment’

“Trolling describes a deliberate, offensive, false or provocative online post.”

CHRIS THOMSON

ALL Denmark councillors up for re-election, including Mayor David Morrell, are turning their backs on social media as trolling spins out of control in the troubled Great Southern shire.

Councillor Peter Caron, up for re-election for Scotsdale/Shadforth Ward, said trolling had been part of Denmark’s political landscape for “a couple of years”.

“I’'ve been a councillor since April 2016 and social media is pretty brutal on the Denmark Community Noticeboard,” Cr Caron said.

“As a sitting councillor, and a nominee, I’ve withdrawn from the social media community noticeboards because it’s not a productive forum.”

“I also did it for my own mental health because it was a toxic environment.”

Since October 2015, five councillors have resigned from the shire. Before several of the current crop of councillors were elected, the shire was put on a State Government financial watch list, where it still languishes.

The Oxford Dictionary defines a troll as “a person who makes a deliberately offensive or provocative online post”.

Rather than lock horns with the trolls, Cr Caron has instead gone old-school to get his message across, with two rounds of flyers being delivered across his ward.

Cr Caron said there had been particularly “lively debate” on the Denmark Community Noticeboard Facebook page.

“A lot of people just don’t bother posting on there any more when it comes to council issues,” he said.

“They find the attacks quite personal sometimes, quite calculated, so they’ve just withdrawn.”

An introduction to the page states: “Anyone crossing the line through racist remarks, hate speech or anything of the like will be removed!”

“People who are here to ‘troll’ and cause trouble will also be removed,” the page continues.

Returning officer for the Denmark election, Heather Marr, has stepped in to advise all candidates that election material, including Facebook pages, needs to be properly authorised.

“Trolling has been an extreme amount of nastiness and slandering comments about decisions the community board has made,” Ms Marr said of the administrators’ decision to delete some vitriolic political posts.

“The comments are really personal and nasty.”

She said a perception in some local quarters that the community board was a platform for the ‘Get Denmark Back on Track’ band of candidates, all former councillors, was simply not true.

“Once cross the line through racist remarks, hate speech or anything of the like will be removed from the group!”

Highway crash slow traffic

The crash on the Albany–Busselton Highway is the second in as many months.

THREE international tourists have received medical attention after a collision on Friday involving a van and a car near Bunbury.

The crash occurred at about 10.30pm on the Busselton–Bunbury Highway between the town of Hahndorf and the south end of the Bunbury Foreshore Reserve.

A 52-year-old driver from the van was taken to Bunbury Hospital with minor injuries, while the 28-year-old driver from the car was treated at the scene before being taken to Bunbury Hospital with head injuries.

A third person, a 34-year-old woman from the same vehicle, was also treated at the scene before being taken to Bunbury Hospital with head injuries.

The crash is one of a series of road accidents in the region in recent weeks, with several fatalities reported in accidents involving pedestrians and cyclists.

The Department of Transport is investigating the cause of the accident and will provide a full report in due course.
Dust settles on program

GRACE JONES

AS PART of an initiative to engage and assist the youth of the Great Southern, representatives from various organisations have banded together to provide educational and welfare programs. Red Dust Healing is an Aboriginal-focused program that aims to instil hope and aid overcoming issues and fears for young Australians. Department of Education Engagement and Training Manager Sue Campbell said the program would enable participants to better fit in the community.

“The aim of the course was to get as many agencies as possible to receive the training,” she said.

“We’d like participants from different agencies as far as Karratha we’ve ensured we’ll be able to reach as many people as possible. And by working together, we can synthesise the data collected.”

“The group will be working closely with each other for the next few months to enable initiatives for the Great Southern community.

“We’ll be working that program, and if all goes well we may be able to apply for more funding to roll Red Dust Healing again in the future.”

After a chance comment made by Mr Campbell to a work colleague, he was given the number for Red Dust Healing founder Tom Powell: “I called him later that day and booked the tour in Roelands for the next few weeks.”

He said he was “absolutely thrilled” by the program, and organised for himself and others to attend.

“I believe it is an initiative that can reach as many people as possible,” he said.

“Red Dust Healing can be used on a personal, family, community and professional level. It’s very adaptable for any person, and can be relatable to anyone.

“The program is essentially Aboriginal healing that can be used for everybody, not just Aborigines. I think it’s the initiative that can strengthen my community.”

CHRIS THOMSON

AN ALBANY council candidate is taking to the streets to speak her views ahead of the closure of local government polls on October 21.

Vicki Brown manages the Small Business Centre Great Southern on Chase Park Road, and is currently running as an independent candidate to represent Fredericktown Ward.

Ms Brown’s last experience as a local police officer was a TrafficSafe shop councillor in 2020.

“Too many people are telling me they saw their daughter out on the streets at 4am and had their car reduced to a shell”

“On Saturday, I had my daughter lined up on the South Street masonic strip on Friday.

“My husband’s a Freemason and a lot of people are telling him.

Ms Brown said she had provided the government with about 7.35am to 10am every day since candidate nomination closed on September 14.

“An old chap who asked me to come in and had someone who wanted me to keep doing this,” she said.

“I said in my opinion of someone who wants to come in and have someone who you can’t find?

“If you don’t want to get out amongst the people who need to be here to be a local government councilor?”

Aide from York Street, Ms Brown’s headquarters are Lockyer Avenue, Sturt Road.

She said she received “lots of toots, lots of thumbs up, the occasional thumbs up, the occasional thumbs down”.

“Too many people are telling me they saw their daughter out on the streets at 4am and had their car reduced to a shell.”

“Too many people like this is the key to why you’ve got to have a council,” she said.

“You see old people who need to have this vote for me, because one vote can make a difference,” she said.

“I can also tell people it’s okay if you don’t vote for me, because you can’t vote by this because it’s not compulsory.

“If you don’t have any, you can’t have a compulsion. You can’t.”

If you want to vote, it’s okay if you don’t vote for me, because one vote can make a difference. If you don’t have any, you can’t have a complaint. You can’t.

City of Albany Council Election 2017

Over the next three editions The Weekender attempts to cut through the spin by asking candidates in Albany’s local government election:

"Is there one specific thing you would do to improve the lives of ratepayers in your ward, around the City of Albany or across the Great Southern?"

This week we focus on the six candidates running for Frederickstown Ward and the three who are competing to represent Vancover Ward. Next week we speak to candidates from Kalgoorlie and Yakamia wards. With polls closing on October 21, we finish our series with Breaksea and West wards in The Weekender’s October 19 edition.

VANCOUVER WARD

Matt Benson-Lidholm

FORMER sawpilot for Agricultural Region. Matt Benson-Lidholm says he would work with the government of Western Australia and the Federal Government on “income-generating, employment-producing opportunities running from an increased focus on tourism in Western Australia, but particularly in our area here.”

“I have the experience. I’ve got the networks. I’ve got the knowledge and I suppose having served in some very Big State Government boards (including being a director on the Board of Racing and Wagering WA, which looks after a $2 BILLION racing industry) one of my big pluses would have to be strategic planning and development,” Mr Benson-Lidholm says.

Nicolette Mulcahy

STVING councillor Nicolette Mulcahy is looking to extend her four-year tenure that followed an 18-month stint as a councillor in 2007/08.

“Elected people spend money and when people spend money everyone pros- pers,” she says.

She is concerned about potential environmental impacts of the planned Vancover lake project, which she plans to keep an eye on in the budget process.

She says she is keen to ensure that any environmental concerns are balanced with potential employment benefits from the project.

Tracy Sleeman

LOCAL, volunteering re-orderator Tracy Sleeman wants to develop tourism in Al- bany, but in her view the needs of the workforce is compatible with the environment.

“I’ll like to work with our tourism, working with the alliance with Flinders, and Denmark, which would increase our jobs and our business and draw what we have here to Australia and world,” Mrs Sleeman says.

She believes each Council Ward should receive $50,000 upgrade to Norwood Road within the 2018 council budget, and to Elizabeth Street, which has started.

FREDERICKSTOWN WARD

Vicki Brown

MILL has one regional representative of Albany, but Frederickstown Ward hopeful Vicki Brown was a Tamburlaine councillor two decades ago.

“I would like to establish an ad hoc group outside from the council and the public who could see what’s wrong and how to fix it,” Mrs Brown says.

“This would be for people who don’t know how the website’s link on our, who don’t know how to find the 2,300 people, who don’t see what the council does, people who don’t necessarily know how to subscribe to the newsletter, so that we can work out when the Blacks are for the information flow.”

“This is the feedback I am getting, that we’re not there is a consultation process, but how do you get involved.

“And all the acronyms are just a cloudy alphabet soup. That’s what I’d do.”

Carolyn Dowling

COMMUNAL councillor Carolyn Dowling, an Albany city councillor since 2012 and a one-time councillor with the City of Melville in Perth until 1994 says she wants to ensure that full-completed projects go ahead within a strategic framework.

“Everything takes money and items process and you’ve got to follow due process and you’ve got to prioritise,” Mr Dowling says.

Examples cited by Mr Dowling are upgrades to Norwood Road within the 2018 council budget, and to Elizabeth Street, which has started.

David Griffiths

FIRST-time council candidate David Griffiths says he wants to do something about community concerns he heard about during the cycle path on Mount Clarence.

“I’d like to see a forum with all the stakeholders involved, and put everything out on the table and find a way forward, because the mountain’s great in there forever and the bike tracks are already there and the two have to co-exist,” Mr Griffiths says.

“There was a safety issue built up above the bike going through and people walking through the bush, and maybe a safety plan needs revising.”

Graeme McBeath

CALLS to Mr McBeath went unreturned. But his online candidates guide reveals an “amphibious economic and environmental development that optimises our region’s unique habitats and which enables Albany a progressive, in- novative, exciting and exceptional regional destination with the capacity to realise its full potential.”

Peter Ratnik

MUSIC conductor Peter Ratnik, who has a PhD in com- positions from the University of Edinburgh, slippered two

“Thanks for the hard work you do in the community,” Mr Ratnik says.

“I think the main one is to hold monthly information communication sessions open to all ages, particularly those who don’t necessarily know how to subscribe to the newsletters, so that we can work out how to make this accessible and we have different views and I hope to establish an end users’ guide from outside the council and the council.”

“I’ve lived here long enough, born and bred, and I won’t have to immediately resign from her council position.

Mr Brayshaw said: “We were lucky enough to have this fine spin bowler at our disposal for a couple of years and we were able to make him look good.”

“When the question of putting our player in the spin bowling category of the World Cup was raised, I got a bit worried.”

Lillee and Thomson are both known for their performances and performances at the English stage and for the English team.

Ashes series, and facing the English team.

The best fast bowler of all time, and Lillee the best batsman of all time, and Lillee the best batsman of all time.

Mr Brayshaw said: “I played a lot of games against Jeff and watched him play for a long time. This book was written to much The same. However, it is worth mentioning that the book is about the careers of two cricket legends Dennis Lillee and Jeff Thomson, and the book is a testament to their contribution to Australian history.”

They were both formidable players who were able to dominate the opposition with skill and technique. Their performances were admired by fans and players alike, and they are remembered as two of the greatest cricketers in Australian history.

Camp Quarantine was established in 1872 and was situated on Mistaken Island with a jetty for arriving ships. A powder quarantine station was built close to the port. These included a jetty were built in 1903. The sprawling complex consisted of 17 separate stone and timber framed structures in varying styles, and was used to deal with various epidemics and diseases from 1897, including the doctors’ and servants’ quarters, isolation ward, mortuary, laundry, washhouse, dispensary, and the first-class quarters. A magazine housed goods and a galley was built in 1903.

The Quarantine Station was decommissioned in 1956 and the Wheeler family then privately leased the station until 1976, and the same was changed to Camp Quarantine. The site was classified by the National Trust in 1977 for its significant architectural character and its historical significance. It commands a prime position in an A-class street, overlooking Princess Royal Harbour across the city.

The need for such a facility arose after a number of incidents involving sickness aboard ships arriving in Albany led to demands for a quarantine station. The building of the station took place in 1903 as a response to the outbreak of influenza, smallpox, and measles. It was used to deal with various epidemics and diseases from 1897, including the doctors’ and servants’ quarters, isolation ward, mortuary, laundry, washhouse, dispensary, and the first-class quarters. Kids, crafts and castles

SUNSHINE made intermittent appearances this school holidays, but that didn’t stop Albany’s kids enjoying the break from textbooks and timetables.

The Museum of the Great Southern holds various art activities, themed ‘Sea city’ (Social Life on the Atlantic of the South Pacific).

Children get creative and ornament fabrics, paper, beads and shells to make brooches, wind chimes, even unique masks.

2015 Matt Disney animated film ‘Moana’ played on loop in the TGA School Room for children to enjoy any time of day.

Ripple Haven set up camp in Eye Park for work, with something for every child, no matter their age.

Four bouncing castles, a petting zoo, activities and a pirate display kept the kids entertained.

“Sunday was nice, with so many people coming down,” Ripple Haven owner Andra France said.

The Albany Public Library held two weeks of book themed activities, including creating minnow retreats, designing legs creations, paper craft, making Pirlo Jackson themed necklaces and constructing mini sandcastle mini pies.

Term four resumes next week on Monday, depending on the weather forecast, and parents.

SPRING HAS SPRUNG

Time for fun in the sun

EVERYONE needs a bit of a holiday, and Margs and I had a fabulous time chasing some sun and forgetting about the problems and pests. Millie the Mutie came too, which added a certain amount to the joy of it. She was sitting in the back seat, her nose pressed against the glass, and her eyes fixed on the road. It was great to meanser home again, but we were soon back on holiday torper by the sight of sumptuous flowers and half-buried plants. For to mention a small lake at the bottom of my conservatory, thanks to some rainfaIIn and the fine days of May.

The great news is that my compact bus has been running happily and the trough has been filled with a healthy serve of high-impact compost. We have a succulent and well-kept garden. The Rosemary is blooming, and the lavender is in full flower. *

Weeds are a problem in the garden. We have a number of lawn areas that need constant attention. Weeds are not only unsightly but also attract pests and diseases. They can also compete with other plants for water and nutrients.

The pesky possums have moved along, which is a relief, but I am not getting too excited yet. My carpet roses are bursting into life and will soon be ready for harvest.

We'll draw a tactful veil around our garden, which can provide useful assistance to elderly residents or those who are just too busy to maintain their gardens.

The good news is that the grass and the garden are now in full swing. The pesky possums have moved along, which is a relief, but I am not getting too excited yet. My carpet roses are bursting into life and will soon be ready for harvest.

Green Fair on the Square 2017 is coming!

The city centre will again be a hive of green activity as the Green Fair on the Square takes again over the town square on Saturday, November 4.

Following last year's hugely successful event, the City of Albany is proud to welcome participants from 9am until 1pm, where they can immerse themselves in a fun, lively and entertaining atmosphere.

Residents will be able to check out the Artisan Upcycled Market-place and Fossicker Tip Shop marquee while kids create recycled artworks and participate in interactive workshops at the Green Sprouts Kids Corner. With even more to do for kids, there will be facepainting, green story time, Happy Feet Fitness and an epic stage show by the EcoFaeries!

While you’re wandering around picking up new information and helpful tips for being green and sustainable, enjoy the festive vibes from live music acts all day. We are looking forward to the sounds of Adam Grok Trio, Myles Mitchell and the Hot Mumma band and the ever popular Albany Shanty Men.

Pop into our Compost Clinic while you’re there and you can find out how to purchase your subsidised price compost bin, with the first purchasers to receive a free kitchen caddy!

For the foodies amongst us there will be delicious local food treats, including wood fired pizzas, street food vendors, juices, hot coffee and cakes, sweets and little treats.

The Green Fair on the Square will promote all things recycled, upcycled, green and sustainable. The entire event is aimed to be waste wise. We will be promoting a wide range of locally hand-made goods that reuse and repurpose goods.

Visit our website www.albany.wa.gov.au for more information.
Pup walk brings hope

Toni Blackley and Sue Bassett will be attending this year’s Bark For Life Great Southern, as well as Ms Bassett’s pooch, Merv.

Those currently living with the indiscriminate disease are good causes.

For me, it’s a personal thing,” Ms Blackley said. “We've done $5000 for the Cancer Council.

“Bark For Life Great Southern is still calling on more participation to enjoy the day with their dogs. “It’s a bit of exercise and fun to have with your four-legged furry friend,” Ms Blackley said. “We are really looking forward to it.”

The Albany event’s goal is to raise $5000 for the Cancer Council. The opening ceremony of the event will commence at 2pm and proceedings will wind up at 5pm.

Bark For Life Great Southern will also feature live entertainment from local band Big Men Working, as well as the annual Cupcake Race, continuing the tradition.

For more details please phone 9842 4717 or email admin@menaracasemortgages.com.au

Hats on for mental health

Hats on for mental health is an event that the Albany community and services that support them, really look forward to, and most importantly keep people talking about mental health.

“We know that this is really important to encourage people to seek help if they need it, and to know what help is available in the Albany Community.”

I think the Mad Hatter’s Tea Party also highlights that looking after our own mental health as individuals and as a community can, and should, be part of two.

Mr Wenzel said by talking about mental health barriers could be broken down that prevent people asking for help when they are going through a tough time.

Each time we have held the Tea Party, we have had people come to the event and find out about services they can access to help them,” he said.

“That’s fantastic, because when people are going through a tough time, often people find they’re alone and nobody can help them, when you just can’t.”

In addition to stalls and information from around 15 local mental health support services, there will be a stack of activities to promote positive mental wellness, including live music, laughter yoga and photo-book.

In contrast, there will be two prizes awarded for best hat and best costume, so people are encouraged to dress up in Mad Hatter style to celebrate the event.

The large Mad Hatter cake will be cut at 11am with free cake for all afterwards, so people are encouraged to dress up in Mad Hatter style to celebrate the event.

Sleep and how to get it

Dr Glenn Fernandes

HOW do you go to wake up like they do in the movies? You know what I’m talking about. The heroine lies in bed, sunlit face on the pillow. Light from a distant stoneware lamp illuminates her face – pink lips, light dusting of face and fair white negligee.

Of course, we all have a story. The villain is tickled with the tickling. The heroine’s eyes spring open. Then she kicks him out of a third-story window, and there’s a last battle with Spiderman, because that’s the kind of movie it is.

But that’s not how I wake up. For a start, the negoti...
The first five years

The first five years of a child’s life are critical for development. The experiences children have in these years help shape the adults they will become. Each child is unique, and their relationship with your child shapes the way your child learns and develops.

In the first five years of life, your child learns best through play. This includes interacting with people, objects and the environment. You can help your child develop new skills by providing opportunities for learning and development.

Developing at different rates

Children grow and develop at different rates. Some parents worry that their child will walk, talk, or do something else at a different time than others. But children develop at their own pace. This is why it’s important to know that development is different for every child.

If you’re wondering about whether your child’s development is normal, it might also be helpful to remember that development is different for every child. It might help to remember that development is different for every child.

Relationships: the foundation for child development

Children’s relationships affect all areas and stages of life. This is because relationships are a key experience in early childhood. They are the most important aspect of your child’s environment because they teach the most about the world around them. They also shape the way they see the world.

Through relationships, your child learns whether or not the world is safe and secure, whether she’s loved, who she is, and what happens when she cries, laughs or makes mistakes. Your child also learns by seeing relationships between other people – for example, the relationship between you, other family members and carers, and how your partner behaves. They also shape your child’s development. This is why relationships are so important for your child.

Taste the Great Southern

SWIRL, small and sip your way around Mount Barker, part of the Great Southern wine region, with Busy Blue Bus Tours and Charters.

Sip and unwind as you meet the owners and winemakers of some of the region’s best wineries share characteristics of West Cape Howe.

On this day tour, you can meet the proprietors and sommeliers of small family-run wineries, such as Eldred’s Arcade and Caudle, while enjoying tastings of the region’s larger ranges of Margaret River and West Cape Howe.

Wines from these award-winning wineries share characteristics of this district, in which grapes express growing conditions, revealing for the world the rich variety and quality grape juice.

You can relax and enjoy a shared platter lunch of local produce, and enjoy a glass of a price-guided wine. Let Busy Blue Bus do the driving, and take you on a journey through a cool, clear, natural environment that creates unique wines. The tour departs Friday, Saturday and Sunday, 10.30am, with return at 4.30pm, with boxes at $159 per person.

You can book online at busymbus.com.au.
May has an axe to grind

CRITIC'S GUILD-SHARING Indi artist Abbe May hit the stage at the White Star Hotel on Sunday night and kept an enthusiastic crowd spellbound with her high-octane, rock-based originals and covers.

May's reputation for intense, raw performances drew an educated crowd of live music appreciators for the new spring Sunday session triple-bill, even if numbers were a little thin on the ground.

White May delivered enough of her better-known tracks to satisfy those who had done their homework, some of the more experimental, song-ending guitar theatrics aside, were a tad off-side.

She was perhaps at her most vulnerable when she put down her Gibson SG and sang a sensitive version of R.D. Lang's Constant Craving.

But the guitar wasn't needed for long, as the second half of the set drifted off somewhat despite May's restrained playing throughout.

The punchy set was brought to an end with May's extended version of her hit Triple J 'Like a Virgin' cover of Garfunkel's 50 years.

The triple-bill kicked off with local singer-songwriter Kris Nelson and WAMI award-winning Perth band Human Bus.

The local thread continued with Albany's Carla Geneve supporting May for her final WA show for the year at Mojitos in Fremantle on Sunday night.

Herman picks up rare war horse

There are a few classic cars around the Great Southern but rarely are considered rare.

Herman Backeringh’s Citroën 2CV-up is a great example.

The variety of the peculiar 2CV was built for the British market in the late 1940s and was made for fighting in war.

“Because they were made super light and easy to lift, the Navy could drop them anywhere in the sea,” Herman said.

“After the minion at the end of the war, the navy just dumped them all in the sea.

“By far the best, of any, if ever, a classic in our collection.”

Herman managed to snag a rare war horse.

“Citroën wanted to build a car that was for the people, but was able to go absolutely anywhere with an economic fuel consumption.

With its 1.510cc air-cooled engine and independent suspension, Citroën managed to build a car that could withstand the Malaysian jungles while getting these two wheels up 10,800.

As it was such an unusual animal to export into Australia, he would bring it over.

“My CV is a car we both know,” he said.

“I saw this and thought, he would be interested.

“Then perfectly and parts are still being manufactured for it.”

I have always said to myself the day I drive

do not want to go fishing in a place that my family should take for granted

get caught, not because I am no longer of sound mind.

This extends to my holidays as well, even though I often go fishing.

I recently found myself in Busselton for a few days and was never actually fished around Busselton which made me nervous as to whether or not I could even catch anything.

I ran into a fisherman who had last fished there and I had last fished there and I had been there more than two years since he had last fished there and I was sceptical as to whether or not I could even catch anything.

This dam was set in the middle of a fishing area and was only recently completed, so I was happy to go absolutely anywhere with a single trolley over the whole dam.

Regardless of how pretty this dam was, we went fishing spots that you could call all.

My little outing on this trip was to a picturesque dam on a wintry day to try and catch some trout that had been stocked there many years ago.

A good friend of mine used to fish the dam often, but had been there more than two years since he had last fished there and I was sceptical as to whether or not I could even catch anything.

One thing that is always enjoyable about fishing in another town is that you can see and explore one of my favourite forms of fishing:

Whenever I want to go, I take any chance I get to chase the trout carp.

We were not able to go and collect the eggs of squid, as it was a small, sunny day, which is only weight or a weight plate makes change. Whether that change a constant challenge to create again because our bodies need regimes. The foundation of all good fitness muscles.

To increasing our metabolism, training exercises are not only weights, but it's not the only way associated with barbells and training certainly isn't the only way to go. You can build serious muscle and 50 in a row is a walk in the park. Example, if you've mastered exercise can come into play. Increases but the movement stays strength. The weight you lift night, the track was still a bit damp flag wasn't needed for an accident.”

“It was really good, close racing for the first time in a long time that a red flag wasn't needed at all.”

Barbells vs bodyweight

By AMBER CEKEREV AC

CAN you build up muscles using only bodyweight?

Strength training is generally associated with barbells and weights, but it’s not the only way to get strong. First, let’s be clear, strength training exercises are not only for bodybuilders. The secret to increasing our metabolism, protecting our joints, increasing our bone density, and living a longer life is a toned body with building strong bones.

Strength training is all about the foundations of good fitness regime.

So what’s the best way to do it? Limitations come with Wing the same weight over and over again because our bodies need a constant challenge to create change. Whether that change comes from our own body weight or a weight plate makes a difference.

If you lift weights, regularly adding more load to your barbell results in increased muscular strength and increases muscle mass. The more you lift, the more the movement stays the same. More creative variation in the exercises can come into play with bodyweight exercises. For example, you can maintain great form in bodyweight square and 50 in one in a walk in the park, consider adding a jumping element to the same movement. Simply drive out of the bottom of the squat to jump as high as you can. Your bodyweight training is an ideal way to build strength.

The dry rack challenge really changed some drivers. “It was really good, close racing between the competitors. The feedback to say the event was really good for the race.” A lot of those said that it was the first time in a long time that a red flag wasn’t needed at all.”

Breakthrough roller derby win

ALBANY’S Great Southern Breakers have broken through for their first roller derby win on a recent trip to Perth for the Boom State Clash round robin competition.

As the door opened for the local team, the Breakers battled their way out for them, with fixtures against Port Hedland’s North West Roller Derby, WA Roller Derby and Bunbury’s Rebel City.

Breaker’s captain Nattle Jarvis said that the Boom State Clash was tough for the Breakers.

“We lost most of our games,” she said. “But our match against Rebel City was a tough win. We were falling behind most of the game and in the last 10 minutes the girls really pulled it out. It was two teams against each other that were really equally matched.”

The Breakers were unable to add to the victory, but Jarvis said the experience had been invaluable.

“We’re the newest league in WA,” she said. “There was going to be a learning curve regardless.”

It just makes us hungrier for the next match.

Breaker’s fans will have to wait until March for the next match, following the announcement that the fixture against Perth’s Rumble Bees had been postponed.

“The Albany Roller Derby League will be opening for new skaters early next year, following the assessments for the Fresh Meat in November.”

“It’s going to be very competitive for people to join the Breakers and for existing players to keep their positions,” Jarvis said.

“The ARDL is only going to get stronger. Bring on March.”

TRAVELLING WITH PETS

Caravanning and camping holidays are a great way for families to enjoy the great outdoors together, and that should include the beloved family pet!

You might be surprised to learn how many caravan and holiday parks in Western Australia will allow you to check in with your pet. Many of them have restrictions, such as keeping pets on a lead at all times and not leaving pets unattended. But they are rules that are generally easy to abide by.

It’s a good idea to look ahead to ensure that pet policies haven’t changed, to see if allocated pet areas are still available and to run through any special conditions. The following are tips from the Caravan Industry Association of Australia for travelling with pets.

BEFORE YOU LEAVE ENSURE THAT:
- Your pet is fully vaccinated and its registration is up-to-date.
- Your pet’s name and contact details are clearly marked on a name tag attached to their collar.
- You have appropriate equipment to transport your pet.
- You pack everything your pet will need for the duration of the trip, as you may not be able to buy the products while travelling.

ITEMS TO PACK FOR YOUR PET:
- Vaccination papers – vital if you want to leave your pet at a boarding kennel during your trips. Kennels may refuse to take your pet without them.
- Food and water bowls/treats
- Grooming equipment
- Toys and blankets/cot
- ‘Poozer scooper’ or plastic bags
- Collar and lead
- Medication
- Some animals react differently to travel and without proper care, it can cause them distress.

WHILE TRAVELLING:
- Take enough water for them for the journey.
- If you are taking your cat or bird, which traditionally do not like to travel, place a blanket or cover over their carry cage in the car, as this can help to keep them calm.
- Make sure they do not overheat in the car.
- Make regular stops to exercise your dog during long journeys.

WHERE TO STAY?
If you’re looking for somewhere to go on your next family holiday, including the entire family, here is a good place to start:

7 RULES OF HAPPY CAMPERS

Caravanning and camping is a favourite holiday for Aussies and international tourists alike. There’s just no better way to enjoy nature and all of our amazing landscapes, plus you get to meet loads of new people while you’re out there.

But we want to make sure you’re not THAT camper who breaks the road. You know – the one who annoys everyone else. Camp manners are a thing so here are our top seven rules to make sure everyone gets to be a happy camper.

1. Leave footprints, never rubbish!
Leaving a mess behind you is the WORST thing you can do. Always dispose of rubbish in the bins provided or take it with you if there are none. Litterbugs are the WORST thing you can do. Always dispose of rubbish in the bins provided or take it with you if there are none. Litterbugs are

2. Keep it quiet at night
Noise travels extremely well through tents and caravan walls, especially at night. Be a great neighbour by not playing loud music late at night or opening and closing doors mainly “campervans – we’re looking at you”. Same goes for those day-break early birds; let everyone else keep snoozing until the sun is well and truly up.

3. Enjoy the wide-open spaces
Where the campground allows, leave a bit of space between your campsite and your neighbours. Most campers like a bit of breathing space so don’t camp right on top of someone else when there is room to spread out. If someone got in before you and got the choice spot, don’t be a bad sport and cramp their style.

4. Go easy with the generator
If you find yourself camping somewhere where everyone else is using dead trees. And if you are lucky enough to camp where there is a shared convenience (like loo paper!), leave some for the next campers who come along to use the space.

5. No shortcuts through campsites
Walk around your neighbours campsite instead of through it. We all know that no one owns their patch of grass or sand but it’s home for a little while, so wherever possible avoid taking shortcuts through other people’s campsite. It’s just polite.

6. Take pictures, but nothing else!
It really should go without saying that we never remove wildlife or things from the natural environment. This includes chopping down healthy trees for firewood, try gathering branches or using dead trees. And if you are lucky enough to camp where there is a shared convenience (like loo paper!), leave some for the next campers who come along to use the space.

7. Mind the rules of the caravan park or campground
We know that camping is all about holiday time so try to remember that these rules and regulations are simply there to ensure everyone is free to enjoy their holiday while sharing the space with others. Do your bit and mind those rules for the sake of happy campers everywhere!

One of the best bits of caravanning and camping is enjoying a beautiful campsite and meeting your fellow campers while you’re there. So don’t be THAT camper who annoys everyone else. Be a good camper because good campers are happy campers!

RECIPES WITH JO CLEWS

Here is a dessert recipe from Camp cook specialist Jo Clews who will be visiting the Great Southern Caravan & Camping Show this year, sharing her ideas and recipes.

APPLE TURNOVERS

Puff pastry is one of my go-to ingredients for camp oven cooking; it’s so versatile, easy to use and the results are just delicious.

INGREDIENTS

- 2 sheets of ready rolled puff pastry
- 2 grated green apples
- ½ cup of sultanas
- a tablespoons of dark brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon of cinnamon

PREPARATION

Peel apples and grate into a bowl, add sugar, spice and sultanas before mixing together well. Lay both sheets of pastry on a flat surface and cut in half with a sharp knife. Wet the edges of the pastry with a little milk or water and place an even amount of apple mix on the pastry sheets. Fold pastry over to encase the apple making sure the seam is on the bottom and with a fork crimp the edges together so apple does not fall out the sides. Place turnovers onto oiled baking trays, brush with milk or beaten egg and sprinkle with a little extra dark brown sugar before making small air holes in the top. Cook in a moderate camp oven on a low trivet with coals scraped to the edges for about 20 minutes, scrape coals to the centre and cook for further 5-10 minutes or until golden and crunchy. Serve with cream custard or icecream.

One piece of advice is to use less heat under your camp oven and more on the top, as it is much easier to control the temperatures and you will not end up with your food being burnt on the bottom. A bag of heat beads or bagged charcoal stashed in the vehicle is a good standby if you arrive at a camp that has no wood for a cooking fire. It’s ok to check your food, an old myth is to not open the camp oven lid while you are cooking as the heat escapes. Well I for one would much rather lose a few degrees in temperature than lose my meal, so the motto is “if in doubt, check it out.”
