Top cop moves on

Police Supt to become state's top traffic cop

CHRIS THOMSON

GREAT Southern Police Superintendent Dom Wood will return to Perth where he is set to become the state's top traffic cop.

"I've done my tenure, so I'm off in July, August," he told The Weekender.

He said that, come July, he will have been in Albany for three years.

"It's gone very quickly," he said. "I love the region, I love the people."

Mr Wood said Superintendent Ian Clarke, who currently works in the police professional standards unit in Perth, would fill his shoes.

"He's a really nice fella, a good bloke," he said.

"He's got a good background, in traffic for a while as a superintendent, and done some crime work, and worked country as well."

"He was an OJC up in Kununurra, and also in Dunsborough, and has some detective background as well."

After a handover to Mr Clarke in July, Mr Wood will become Superintendent, State Traffic.

"You can, if all the stars line up, try to push [your tenure] out to maybe four [years], which I was kind of thinking, maybe [until] Christmas, but they said 'no', they want me to take over and do the State traffic role up at Midland," he said.

Immediately before coming to Albany from Perth, Superintendent Wood was the police force's Manager, Media and Communications.

"We've got a couple of older kids back up in Perth, and we always knew I was never going to retire down here," he said.

"I'm too young to retire, so I always knew this was about a three-year tenure."

"I'll still get the chance to come back down here with a booze bus, maybe."

He said he'd miss Albany's bush walks and coffee shops.

"My wife and I were out on the boat on the weekend, the Vancouver Street Festival became a bit hot, and I said: 'C' mon, let's get the boat out'," he said.

"We went out with a couple of friends of ours, and we were followed by dolphins in the harbour."

"So, I'll miss the town, and the community is a very good community, a very friendly community."

In other policing news, Mr Wood said a drug detection police dog was on the cards for the Great Southern (Canines for GS cops, p.5 of today's Weekender).

Mr Wood said one priority he would pass on to Mr Clarke would be to "keep pushing" for a canine to join the ranks of the local constabulary.

GOODE Beach resident Charles Pierce was so nervous before meeting the Queen earlier this month, he was suited up and ready to leave for Buckingham Palace five hours early.

His visit to the palace was no ordinary tourist trip - he flew halfway across the world to receive a medal from Queen Elizabeth II and be granted the title of 'MBE' at The Queen's Birthday 2017 Honours List ceremony on May 4.

Mr Pierce was recognised for four decades of education services to Vanuatu, the country he called home for more than half his life.

The 77-year-old Englishman said after travelling throughout Asia in his younger days, he discovered the Baha'i faith, and it was through this faith he began his journey of teaching abroad.

He now calls Albany home and has done so for the past five years, in-between trips to Vanuatu.

MBE honour for 40 years of service

"I'm a teacher by trade, and I heard through my Baha'i faith that people were needed in the Pacific, to help develop and grow the Baha'i people in the community," he said.

"So I lived and worked for a year in Vanuatu, married my wife in Australia a year later in 1968, then in 1971 went back to Vanuatu and stayed there for 42 years."

Mr Pierce said his work in Vanuatu focused on promoting unity and education within the Baha'i faith, building greater community cohesion and empowering people.

"One of the two questions the Queen asked me was what kind of education I was involved in," Mr Pierce said.

"I told her I was principal of a secondary and tertiary school, was involved in training teachers, taught a Baha'i moral education program, and was involved in developing, producing and delivering a course in climate change.

"She thought it was wonderful."

The other question the Queen asked Mr Pierce during the MBE ceremony was whether he lived in Vanuatu.

"I told her that I did, and that I remembered her visiting years ago, and that she wore a yellow dress," Mr Pierce said.

"I think she was quite moved when I said that, she was smiling."

Despite speaking with relative ease during his few moments with the Queen, Mr Pierce was a bundle of nerves in the hours leading up to his royal encounter.

He said he took an hour to carefully put on his suit, a piece of attire he hadn't donned in 50 years.

"I was terrified," he laughed.

"The night before the ceremony, I didn't get to bed until after midnight and I was up at 4am.

"I just could not sleep.

"We had to be there at 9.45am but I was ready by 5am!"

After keeping it a secret from his family for two months, and finally receiving his medalion, Mr Pierce said the reality of being awarded MBE finally sunk in.

"It wasn't real until I got the medal," he said.

"It felt very privileged and honoured.

"But it's not about the medal, it's about what you have done to receive it."

Royalties spend 'misleading'

CHRIS THOMSON

REGIONAL Development Minister Alannah MacTiernan says last week's State Budget includes $4 billion royalties for Regions funding that will grow the Great Southern's economy, but Opposition Leader Mike Nahan says the program is being manipulated.

Ms MacTiernan said the Budget's $4 million Royalties for Regions allocation would diversify the region's economy.

"We recognise the Albany Entertainment Centre as the heart of arts and culture for the region; our $500,000 per year investment will keep the centre operating at the standard Albany residents have come to know and love," she said of funding announced a fortnight ago.

She said the government was also getting on with delivering election commitments across the region.

"The Albany wave energy project is progressing, with leading University of Western Australia researchers now based in the Great Southern," she said of another much-publicised initiative.

But Dr Nahan, planning a trip to Albany in early June, said the Government was "misleading regional Western Australia by manipulating Royalties for Regions".

"This Government is sneakily shifting the cost of Government services that are normally met by consolidated revenue into Royalties for Regions," Dr Nahan said.

"By the end of the forward estimates, Royalties for Regions will have been gutted by 40 per cent."

Albany MLA Peter Watson said the Budget had a strong focus on responsible financial management, and so was on track to return to surplus.

"We are getting on with the job of implementing the new WA Jobs Law and helping local Albany businesses secure work from the State Government," he said.

He said that in the Great Southern $83.2 million would be spent on "job-creating infrastructure".

Funding across the region includes $250,000 to develop a business case for an artificial surf reef in Albany, and $250,000 to plan for an upgrade of the boat harbour at Bremer Bay.

WHAT'S ON this weekend

 6dLIVElounge at Six Degrees is hosting Timothy Nelson, supported by Kris Nelson, on Friday night from 8pm.

The award-winning Perth artist's music has been dubbed 'power-pop, all-country and classic rock and roll hammered down into a sound that doesn't feel like an exercise in time travel'.

Albany Sinfonia's Fire concert will run across the weekend.

The group will be at Wesley Church on Friday night from 7.30pm and at Denmark Civic Centre on Saturday.

Walpole boys Dig the Dust will play closer to home at Denmark Hotel on Friday night from 8pm, before heading to the big smoke to play the White Star on Saturday night from 8pm.

Blues crooner Tracey Barnett is playing the White Star on Sunday arvo from 5pm.

THEATRE
 The Farm and Co3 Australia performance companies are presenting Frank Einstein on Saturday night at 7.30pm at the Albany Entertainment Centre.

NATIONAL FAMILIES WEEK
 To celebrate the event, Yongergrow-Ongrup CRC is hosting an Ongrup and Borden Scavenger Hunt on Friday afternoon commencing at 4pm.

Families comprise the teams and each team will be given a set of riddles and clues to decipher and find town treasures.

Make sure you RSVP so the CRC can cater adequately for the picnic after the hunt.

Devil is in the detail for roundabout servo

CHRIS THOMSON

TORTUOUS negotiations – including on a safe entry point and a $9000 piece of public art – continue over a fuel station planned for near the Chester Pass roundabout, despite a building permit having been issued for the contentious project.

City of Albany chief planner Paul Camins told The Weekender a building application was approved for the Albany Highway site in April.

He said the permit was valid for two years, and if the proponent, Peter D. Webb & Associates town planners, wished to extend it a standard application process would apply.

In August, the State Administrative Tribunal overturned the City's February 2017 refusal of a development application for the project.

In her conditions of approval, Tribunal member Rosetta Petrucci ordered that access points and stormwater management to the highway be designed to the specification of Main Roads Western Australia.

Main Roads Great Southern regional manager Andrew Duffield said such a requirement was standard, and in "99.99 per cent of the cases never an issue".

"This one's been topical from Day 1," he said.

"We have just been wanting to work with [the proponent] over safe access to the site and it's taken quite some time to get them to the table.

"It's very clear there's a whole range of other things they need to get approval and endorsement of."

Mr Duffield said stormwater was one.

"If they're looking to tap into our network, then we need to know about it and we need to give approval of it," he said.

He explained that drawings submitted with the development application were site layout plans only that "did not give any particular engineering detail".

He said that for projects abutting a main road it was perfectly normal for discussions to ensue on technical details such as the type of paving, and a traffic management plan for the construction phase.

"It's not as simple as: 'SAT has given us approval, we can do whatever we want'," he said.

Mr Duffield said he sat down with the proponent on May 7 to help improve the project's on-site traffic circulation, which would lead to fewer cars backing up out onto the highway.

The planned exit on to Albany Highway is about five car lengths from the entrance to the roundabout, the worst intersection in regional WA in terms of frequency and cost of crashes.

"I hope [the proponent] come[s] back to us fairly quickly with their modifications, and if things are looking okay we'll tick it off, and away they'll go," Mr Duffield said.

He said Main Roads was dealing with Peter D. Webb & Associates on "a number of other" projects in Perth.

"We're very happy to see development, but there are some sites that are more challenging than others," he said.

"Whilst [a fuel station] might be allowed under that zoning, so there are a number of other options which had a lower traffic generation [and] traffic impact capacity.

"For example, a showroom would have been within those zonings and we would have been much happier with a showroom than a high traffic generating site."

Mr Duffield said road safety was his paramount concern.

Ms Petrucci also ordered the developer to either erect a piece of public art worth 0.5 per cent of the $1.8 million project cost, or contribute 0.3 per cent of the project cost if additional landscape and building treatments were proposed to the satisfaction of the City.

Mr Camins said Peter D. Webb & Associates was yet to advise if art, or the extra landscaping and building work, would be chosen.

The company's Managing Director, Nik Hidding, said his "client" had instructed him not to comment to the media. The owner of the site is Victorian-based Procon Developments, which has arrangements for at least two Coles Express and one BP servo to be built in WA.

Mercedes Benz gone in 30 seconds

■ Volunteer fire fighters at Paddy Shot, shortly after dousing the fire.

A MERCEDES Benz was totalled on Tuesday after catching fire at Paddy Shot, near Ocean Beach.

Denmark police Senior Constable Amanda Ball said the driver had parked to get his binoculars out to have a look across the inlet when he heard a popping noise.

"He was out of the car for about two minutes, looked back and there were flames emanating from the steering wheel," she said.

"So it's probably an electrical fault of some description, and within 30 seconds the car was completely engulfed in flames.

"And the result is, the car is just a shell."

That was at 10.10am.

Senior Constable Ball said volunteer firefighters attended, as did Denmark police – to check there was "no criminality" involved, "which there doesn't appear to be".

Nothing succeeds like succession

CHRIS THOMSON

ARRANGING a successful handover of the family farm to the next generation will be the subject of a workshop to be held in Ongerup on June 8.

Ellie Stone, whose family grows wheat, canola, barley, lupins, and merino and cross-bred sheep at Boxwood Hill, says succession planning regularly comes up in conversation in regional areas. "Many family farming businesses have completely different structures to one another, but a lot of the issues remain the same – what's going to happen in the future, when will it be my turn to take on the farm, how do I keep Dad happy, how do we keep the lines of communication open?," she says.

"I think that marrying into a farm business, it can be quite hard coming into a family that has its own way of communication, and finding your place in the farming business." Ms Stone, who is president of the Ongerup branch of Women in Farming Enterprise – better known by its acronym, 'WIFE' – says there is no one-size-fits-all solution to farm succession.

"But I think the core values of how to communicate better and how to approach things, and how important planning for the future is, always stay the same across the board," she says.

"We've got four sons, aged four, eight, and the twins are five, and they're already mad-keen farmers.

"So, for my family, we're looking for the future of how we can set ourselves up for our sons' opportunities to work on the farm if they wish to, or in other avenues if they choose."

WIFE will run a workshop on farm succession at Ongerup Sporting Complex from 9am to 2.30pm on June 8. All comers, including blokes, are welcome to attend.

Farmer-cum-accountant Ben Thompson, from Ironbridge Group, and Michael Pyne from HPH Solutions, will talk on the day.

"I suspect a lot of the younger generations who potentially married in to farming families will participate on the day," Mr Pyne says.

"A lot of the farmers who started farming in the '60s and '70s are now starting to get to the point of retiring and there is a big difference between that generation of farmers and these ones.

"The younger generations want to know what's happening and how things are going to be structured, whereas you only have to step back a generation and it was pretty much: "You do what you're told and you don't ask questions, and we'll tell you when it's time to be told."

He says that especially when a farming enterprise is carrying a lot of debt, securing a comfortable life for retiring farmers and security for their families while ensuring the future viability of the farm is a challenge.

He says a particular concern for women is securing a future for their off-farm children.

"A lot of them are used to a huge proportion of assets ending up with a son coming home to the farm, and the off-farm children being left with not much," he explains.

"I think a lot of women want to ensure there is a balance, that it's not all about the farm and the pressure that comes with that.

"It can't always be equitable – otherwise, in many cases, you'd have to sell the farm – but I think it can be fair.

WIFE members can attend the workshop for $15, and non-WIFE members for $25.

RSVPs to Ongerup@wife.org.au by June 1.

New lease on life for Albany Town Hall

A MILLION bucks will aid the upgrading of Albany's historic town hall as it becomes the final piece in the City of Albany's ongoing project to revitalise the city's civic heart.

The conversion of a dressing room in the town hall will be the first step in the upgrade, to provide temperature-controlled storage for the City's art collection.

This will take approximately three weeks from late May and will not cause any disruption to town hall users during this period.

Full project design and development will take place between July and December this year.

The community will be able to continue to use the gallery space until construction works begin in early 2019, with the town hall expected to reopen in early 2020.

■ Sand Sculpture WA's Tim Danby, Albany local Justine Gray and fellow sculptor Shani Graham worked hard to repair the sculpture in January.

Sand sculpture vandal fined $800

AN ALBANY man has pleaded guilty to vandalising a sand sculpture at Middleton Beach that was part of Albany's Australia Day celebrations.

Officer in charge of Albany Police Grant Pollard said Derek Andy Loo, 23 of Albany, was on April 19 fined $800 in the local magistrates court.

"This was just a random act of vandalism, which, given the impact on the artist and the community, we look at in a very severe light," Senior Sergeant Pollard said.

"Thanks to several members of the public and employees of the City of Albany, Albany police were able to proceed this to a successful prosecution."

City of Albany community services chief Susan Kay said police had told the City the case had closed after a witness statement led to the arrest and conviction.

In the days leading up to January 26, Sculptor Tim Darby had painstakingly carved a pile of sand into a pair of whales.

Ms Kay said City staff were devastated to find the sculpture destroyed when they arrived on site early on Australia Day morning.

Drug dog for GS police

CHRIS THOMSON

ON THE heels of a recommendation that police dogs and horses be afforded protection under Western Australia's Animal Welfare Act, the Superintendent of Police for the Great Southern says a police dog is a distinct possibility for the region.

"We've been pushing for a while, and they are reviewing trying to get a police dog in our district," Inspector Don Wood told The Weekender. "We think we will get one, but when, I don't know."

He said drug detection dogs sometimes saw action in his district, as recently as last week in a rural area.

"It would be difficult to justify a general purpose dog for tracking and all that, because we just don't have the level of burglaries and crime that they have in the metro area," he said.

"But certainly there is talk of an agreement that we can get a drug detection dog down here at this point."

Inspector Wood said that, most likely, one of the existing patrol officer positions in the region would be converted to a dog handler position.

"All we would have to do is find a position, for example we could have an officer down here who puts their hand up and says 'I'd like to become a dog handler', and he or she could do the [handler's] course," he said.

"And, if the time is right, the next dog that is available would come down here."

Inspector Wood said police horses also helped patrol the region from time to time.

"Over the summer period, we had a little bit of an increase in crime in the Albany town centre, so we did actually bring the horses down [from Perth] and we coincided that with the 150-year anniversary of the police station, so they came down for that," he said.

"The WA Police Union is advised that police horses are worth approximately $150,000 after their initial purpose and associated training.

"The monetary worth of a general duties puppy can also be as much as $15,000."

Mr Tilbury advises that about four police dogs are injured on average each year.

"Police animals are often deployed in dangerous situations for the purpose of law enforcement," he notes.

"The Act should be amended to reflect the gravity of assaulting one."

Recycling carrot and stick

CHRIS THOMSON

WEEKS after it introduced a law allowing it to fine residents $350 if they toss the wrong kind of junk in their recyclable bins, the City of Albany has praised locals for improving their recycling techniques.

Waste Sustainability Officer Julie Passmore said five per cent less contamination had been found in kerbside recycling bins over the past year.

Ms Passmore said that audits by waste contractor Cleanaway in January found contamination in 15 per cent of recycle bins checked, down from 20 per cent in January 2017. She said bins contaminated with loose plastic bags decreased from 13 per cent to 7 per cent.

Incorrect items placed in recycling bins included plastic bags, food scraps, nappies, electrical waste, polystyrene, clothing, scrap metal and non-container plastics.

"Contaminated recycling impedes the sorting process, can damage machinery and even send an entire truckload of recyclables to landfill," Ms Passmore said.

"Good community recycling habits combined with the machine and hand sorting at Albany's material recovery facility mean the bales of recyclable materials coming out of Albany have low rates of contamination and are more sought after on the recycling market."

Plastic bags are the most common contaminant found in recycling and can cause machinery at the sorting facility to grind to a halt.

Ms Passmore said that audits by waste contractor Cleanaway in January found contamination in 15 per cent of recycle bins checked, down from 20 per cent in January 2017.

"Soft plastics which can be crunched into a ball can be taken to the REDcycle collection points at Coles supermarkets in Albany or otherwise must be put into the general waste bin," she said.

Cleanaway staff conduct weekly bin audits along selected streets and drivers can also detect contamination via a camera fitted inside collection trucks.

"Most residents try to do the right thing and contamination usually occurs by mistake," Ms Passmore said.

Asked why, in the light of Albany's improvement, the city on February 27 introduced a $350 fine for incorrect recycling ('Non-recyclers now up to $350 fine', March 2).

City CEO Andrew Sharpe said the new Waste Local Law was consistent with other local laws elsewhere in the state.

He said the law brought Albany's waste and recycling governance in line with a state standard recommended by the WA Local Government Association and the Department of Water and Environmental Regulation.

"The City of Albany's goal is to help our community use bins correctly and decrease contamination of recycling and green waste, decrease waste sent to landfill, and increase recovery of recyclable items," he added.

"The issuing of fines would be a last resort for people who refuse to respond to requests and education to use bins correctly."

"We are encouraged by residents' efforts to sort their waste correctly and hope to see recycling contamination rates continue to decrease."

■ Mrs Pettersen with the book for which she wrote a chapter.

CHRIS THOMSON

IN A short chapter for a national anthology titled Growing up Aboriginal in Australia, dual cultural woman Carol Pettersen gives a deeply personal account of what it is like to be on the receiving end of bigotry – from both white and black people.

"This is probably the beginning of more writings of mine," Mrs Pettersen tells The Weekender.

"It's also about the racism displayed by some Aboriginal people today, not just non-Aboriginal people, and this did not happen to just me and my family but many others born into a dual culture."

It is an experience shared by the book's editor, Anita Heiss, a Wiradjuri woman who grew up in Sydney. In her 2012 autobiography titled 'Am I Black Enough For You?', Dr Hess asks why Australia is so obsessed with notions of identity.

Mrs Pettersen's father was a white man, and her mother a Menang Noongar woman born by the banks of Lake Mullockup, or Warriup Swamp as most Noongar people know the waterway east of Albany.

"Mum was semi-tribal, in that she lived in the bush all her life, and we grew up in the bush," Mrs Pettersen says.

"She knew nothing else but living in the bush."

"I've taught my family to be just as proud of their white grandfather as they are of their black grandfather."

In his 2006 interim decision on native title claims over south-western Australia, Federal Court Justice Murray Wilcox concluded that Aboriginal people were forced off their land, families broken up, and "probably in every Noongar family there is at least one white male ancestor".

"That's where all our surnames come from," Mrs Pettersen reflects matter-of-factly on Justice Wilcox's observation.

In the ruling, he expressed surprise that members of families seemed mostly to have kept in contact with each other and with other Noongar families, and many – if not most – children had learned traditional skills and Noongar beliefs.

Mrs Pettersen says the racism she still faces from some Noongar people is unfair on those with dual cultural backgrounds, and the bigotry has deep roots.

"The government did this," she explains.

"Let me tell you, what happened when we moved into the mission, my brother and sister were there first, and I was at home and I didn't know where they'd gone."

"We were still in the bush. Mum and Dad and me and my sister."

She says her mother and father insulated her and her older sister from the politics of the time.

"All we knew were glorious days," she smiles.

Mrs Pettersen says that when she and her sister moved to the mission they stayed in a separate little room from other Noongar girls who lived in a dormitory.

"We were not allowed in their room, and they were never allowed in our room," she recounts.

"Now I don't know what they told them, but we read, later on in getting our files, that we were to be regarded as whites."

"They must have told these girls, 'don't go in there because they are white girls', and that's been passed down, even though they know my mother's black, and some of them are my cousins and yet they still called us 'white' because they were taught by the government to do this."

Mrs Pettersen says that without the combined discipline of her mother's and father's cultures her family would not be "the tolerant and loving people that we are".

"Every now and again you'll get from non-Aboriginal people: 'But, you're different!'" she says.

"And I say to them that I am the proper Aboriginal."

She says it is not enough to say: "I'm a proud Aboriginal woman".

"It's about the doing and it's about the feeling and it's about the application of that pride," she adds.

"Well, show us what pride is – and that's about when I look down and see my great-grandchildren following my same values that my grandparents taught me, that's what pride feels like."

"That comes from a long line of discipline and a foundation of values." Co-owner of York Street's Paperbark Merchants, Lockie Cameron, says sales of a small run of the book have exceeded expectations. The bookshop has ordered more, which should be available by the time The Weekender hits the streets this week.

Major upgrade for schools

ALBANY Secondary Education Support Centre will get a new room designed to develop students' senses, as part of a $9.8 million State Government funding injection.

The centre will receive new and upgraded facilities, including a life skills room to provide students with confidence to live independently, and a classroom designed to develop students' senses through lighting, colours, sounds and objects.

Eight classrooms will be refurbished to meet growing enrolments, and existing classrooms at the co-located North Albany Senior High School will be repurposed. Albany MLA Peter Watson said the centre was "critical" for students to develop skills and independence while receiving a quality education at a school that is close to home.

"These upgrades will help meet the individual high support needs of the students at the centre, including specialist facilities, to provide the necessary personal care or behaviour support they need," Mr Watson said.

A meeting room and staff study area are also included in the upgrades, and the secondary school and education support centre will both get new car parks.

The Government expects work to be completed in 2021.

North Albany Senior High School will also get six new classrooms, two science laboratories, a staff study area, and more staff and student toilets.

2018 bulk kerbside collection for green and hard waste

Verge collection information

Residents with a regular kerbside wheeled bin collection service can place up to two 6x4 trailer loads or two cubic metres of hard waste and a further two trailer loads of green waste on the verge.

Anytime Fitness Albany Club Manager Tiffany Kenny will participate for a second year in the 24 Hour Treadmill Challenge to raise money for Suicide Prevention Australia.

Breakfast, lunch and dinner at Tiffany's

GRACE JONES

HER own battle with depression and anxiety has prompted Albany's Anytime Fitness gym manager Tiffany Kenny to get behind a nation-wide 24 hour treadmill challenge to help raise money for suicide prevention.

Ms Kenny said she got involved with the fundraiser in Perth last year and was keen to run another successful event in her new home town.

"Together we raised around $15,000," she said.

"I don't think we'll quite get there in Albany but we'll definitely give it a go."

So far, Ms Kenny has 15 people registered for the event and is calling for more people to get involved.

"Anxiety, depression and suicide is rampant in the country," she said.

"I've had my own battle with depression and anxiety, and I've known a lot of people in Albany who lost theirs."

"Supporting suicide awareness and prevention is really important to get behind and get involved with."

Among the registered runners is Anytime Fitness trainer Red Rogers, who is aiming to jog the full 24 hours. "He wants to raise $1440 so it's a dollar for every minute he's on the treadmill," Ms

Kenny said.

"He's up to $500 now, which is really good."

"We're going to set him up with his PlayStation so he can play games while he's jogging."

To donate money to the 24 Hour Treadmill Challenge, give Red a dollar for his goal or to register for the event on May 25 head to the Tread Together website or visit the Anytime Fitness Albany Facebook page.

CRCs fight funding cuts

COMMUNITY Resource Centres across regional WA will keep railing against the State Government's recent cut to their funding.

Jane Chilcott, Chief Executive Officer of a body that represents the CRCs, Linkwest, said it was unclear why CRCs were being targeted by the State, particularly in light of independent reports supporting the work they do with the funding they receive.

"While CRCs received funding increases under the previous government, this was coming off a very low base and so figures used to attempt to justify the cuts are disingenuous," she said.

"In fact, CRCs provide essential services to their communities and the current level of funding enables them to just meet demand."

"We will continue to fight these cuts despite the David and Goliath nature of the battle."

Last month, Regional Development Minister Alannah MacTiernan wrote to all CRCs seeking feedback on a recommended future funding approach at what she called "a more sustainable level".

Under that approach, confirmed in last week's State Budget, most CRCs will be offered $70,000 a year.

Some CRCs will be offered $50,000 a year where they are located in a community larger than 3000 people, or within 30km of another CRC or major regional centre.

Ms MacTiernan said CRCs should focus on the delivery and facilitation of government, health and community information and services.

She said greater emphasis should be placed on the use of video conferencing to improve service delivery.

"CRC funding blew out tremendously under the Barnett spending spree," she said on April 30. "The total CRC operational cost of $5.9 million in 2009-10 ballooned to $13 million five years later."

"We were elected to bring the finances back in order, and our out-year allocation of $8 million represents what would have been the normal trajectory of growth."

"There is no intention to close the program or to stop the funding of CRCs - we have allocated $42 million across the forward estimates for the CRC program."

CWA looks for fresh start

ASHLEIGH FIELDING

THE Country Women's Association of Albany has begun a desperate search for new members in an attempt to return the group to its former glory.

Branch president Abigail Parker said the branch began in 1938 but was forced to fold in 2006 due to a drop in membership.

Since then, Ms Parker said the group's current home - the CWA Hall on Serpentine Road - had been privately leased out, until earlier this year when the group took back the reins of the hall in membership.

She said she hopes to reinstate the CWA branch and get the group involved in the community once again.

Ms Parker said she and secretary Anne Barton are now on the look-out for new, young members to continue the traditions and activities of CWA.

"CWA isn't just for when you retire," the pair urged.

"We need some young blood to keep it going and bring new ideas in."

Ms Barton said she remembers the CWA Hall being a hive of activity back in its day, hosting birthdays, social gatherings and "28 and Ovens".

She too wants CWA

CWA Albany's Lilah Lanigan, Abigail Parker and Anne Barton.

Albany to grow again and bring women across generations together to encourage friendships and lesson sharing.

"It's not just about scones and tea," Ms Barton said.

"Our goal is to create a vibrant branch that gets out with the community," Ms Parker added.

"CWA is about what women want it to be about, and the projects we do are based on what the members want to do."

The pair said in order for the CWA Hall to offer classes such as the traditional cooking classes, it requires refurbishment in the kitchen, a disabled toilet and disabled access.

They said they are currently in the process of applying for grants to fund these fixes, and hope more people can join the group to increase the group's likelihood of attracting funding.

If you would like to join the CWA Albany branch, you can contact Ms Parker on 0403 783 669 or Ms Barton on 0412 937 641.

Potts heroics

THE article, "Kojonup war hero's flag flies," (The Weekender, April 25) is a rewriting of history.

Brigadier Potts did not "recapture Kokoda and defeat the Japanese troops".

He was sent with a smaller group of mainly newly trained troops to defend Port Moresby against a larger experienced Japanese force that had landed on the north shore and advanced over land on the Kokoda Trail.

His orders from General Blamby – in Melbourne – were to attack the Japanese and drive them back.

Having seen the results of attacking a superior force in the first world war, he disobeyed orders and fought a strategic withdrawal until the Japanese were within sight of Port Moresby but out of supplies and exhausted.

His brilliant tactics without doubt saved Pt Moresby and shortened the war.

For his efforts, he was relieved of his command and sidelined for the rest of the war.

By disobeying stupid orders and his brilliant command of a fighting withdrawal that exhausted the Japanese supplies, he saved the war in New Guinea and in every respect was a real hero.

Fence off Salmon Holes

ON READING the front page of the May 3 issue of The Weekender ("Mandatory life jack lifeline"), on the problems at the Salmon Holes, I felt I would like to comment on it.

Firstly, I am not a fishing person, but to put a stop to the various stupid people who risk other people's lives when fishing off these slippery rocks, not to mention the waves that sweep them off, why not just fence off the whole area?

Put up a sign in languages as well as English saying no fishing allowed, if caught there will be a hefty fine and no one is to be rescued, so it will be at that person's risk.

Surely this seems to me to be the obvious solution and save the expense and worry of life jackets and extra phone coverage etc.

Common sense should prevail.

Sun shines on festival

■ Bryan Thompson.

THIS year's Vancouver Street Festival, its penny-farthing treadlies and a rock band or two rolled out 'neath the verdant slopes of Mount Melville on a magical Saturday afternoon.

As the street was shut down, locals moved their jalopies to nearby laneways and real estate agent Evan Samiotis cancelled a home open.

Taking over in their stead was a plethora of actors, folk musicians and festival aficionados who leisurely trod the tarmac of one of Albany's oldest thoroughfares.

As the henna tattoo stall did a roaring trade, one urbane household took advantage of the passing parade to open up its filigreed front verandah to invited onlookers.

Bike ride to Boston

■ Ross Wolfe.

BIKES, beats and brews rocked Denmark on Saturday when the local mountain bike club arranged a six-hour endurance ride.

Riders of all ages donned the lycra from noon to tear up the dirt and grass track, whose finish line was located at the bottom of the vineyard at Boston Brewery.

The sun set behind a burn-off haze, and the ride ended at 5.15pm sharp.

Spectators and exhausted participants ambled up the hill to enjoy a beer, a chew and a beat or two as the unseasonably warm afternoon turned into Saturday night.

Kings Antiques & Restorations

A BEAUTIFUL, solid piece of furniture is not only a thing of great beauty but also an asset and potential heirloom.

Antique furniture is highly prized and creates an impressive statement in any home.

But what do you do with the perfect piece you found or inherited which needs a bit of work done on it?

Take it to Kings Antiques and Restorations.

With more than 34 years' experience in both the UK and Australia, Steve and Gloria King are the local experts in antique furniture restoration.

Using traditional techniques and French polishing, Steve and Gloria can restore your special piece of furniture back to its former glory.

Not only do the Kings restore furniture, they can also custom-make reproduction pieces and create from scratch a replica of an existing piece of antique furniture.

Kings also import antique furniture; so, if you are looking for a particular piece, they can source and import it for you.

As well as their furniture business, the Kings also restore and service antique clocks and can even re-silver old mirrors.

With the motto "We are here to help", Steve and Gloria are also more than happy to offer advice regarding your antique furniture.

Royal names of Albany

■ Mount Clarence from Grey Street c.1910.

by Museum of the Great Southern public programs officer Malcolm Trail

WITH royal fever rife at the moment, it is timely to consider some of the royal names around Albany and to link them to the British royal family itself.

Menang people know this area as Kintjarling or Kincinpin, but when British explorers and settlers arrived here many landmarks and streets were named after their patrons and rulers. George Vancouver, the first European to land on this coast in 1791, named the large area of water King George the Third's Sound, and the enclosed harbour, Princess Royal Harbour.

Now shortened to King George Sound, this name honours the British monarch of the time, George III, who ruled for 60 years. The father of 15 children, he later descended into mental instability. For the last nine years of his reign his eldest son, the Prince of Wales, ruled in his place as Prince Regent.

The Princess Royal, the title traditionally given to the monarch's eldest daughter, refers to Princess Charlotte, George III's fourth child. She married a German prince and became Queen of Wurttemberg in Germany, where she died in 1828.

The German connection to Albany is strong. Names like Hanover Bay, Brunswick Road and Osnaburg Street (now Bridges Street, renamed after World War I) all have links to Germany.

The chief inspiration for the name "Albany" is Frederick Augustus, Duke of York and Albany, Earl of Ulster and Prince Bishop of Osnaburg. Frederick was George III's second son and was notable as a military commander. He inspired the rhyme "The Grand Old Duke of York".

York", which was uncompromising about his decision-making and military strategy!

Prior to the adoption of the name "Albany" in 1831, Frederick Augustus inspired another name, though unofficial: Frederick's Town. This name was used by Major Edmund Lockyer in his journal but was never adopted.

The Duke of York and Albany married Prussian princess Frederica, but they spent most of their married life apart. The Duke indulged his fancy for mistresses, most especially Mary Anne Clarke, a notorious London socialite and actress.

Mrs Clarke, always eager to improve her financial situation, hit upon a scheme to take commissions in the British Army via the unknown Duke. As a reforming administrator, this was exactly the scam that he was determined to stamp out.

The press was notified, questions were asked in Parliament, libel charges were laid, cartoons were published, and the Duke was forced to resign from his position as the Army's Commander in Chief. In time he was reappointed, but his disgraced mistress went into self-exile in France, never to return.

The Duke himself died in 1827, the year the British officially claimed King George Sound as a settlement. Had he lived, he would have succeeded his brother George IV as King of England.

As it was, his younger brother the Duke of Clarence was crowned King William IV, and his wife, another German, became Queen Adelaide. Albany's iconic mounts are named after this couple. William also had no legitimate children, so the crown passed to his niece Queen Victoria in 1837. Albany's Victoria Street is named after her.

Meanwhile, King William's eldest illegitimate son, Lord George Fitzclarence, was given the honorary title of the Earl of Munster in 1831, hence Munster Road.

The Dukedom of Albany would later be abolished. Queen Victoria split the two titles, York and Albany, in 1881 so her youngest son could be Leopold, Duke of Albany. He fought on the German side in World War One, so the title was discontinued by the Crown after the Treaty of Versailles in 1919.

However, the descendants of the last Duke of Albany still live in Germany as minor royalty, so we should consider that Prince Hubertus of Saxe-Coburg and Prince Andrew, the current Duke of York, could come together to once again create a united Duke of York and Albany!

Discover diverse aspects of the Great Southern at the Museum of the Great Southern's Tuesday Curatorials. The topic for 22 May is 'New approaches, new publics - Focussing on the Museum of the Great Southern' and will be presented by Malcolm Trail. Entry is by gold coin donation.

Ashleigh saddles up

■ Ashleigh Prichard competed with her horse Baylaurel Panache.

GRACE JONES

DENMARK College of Agriculture year 11 student Ashleigh Prichard got a taste of equestrian competition recently at the 'Saddles Plus' State Inter-school Equestrian Championships at Brigadoon.

The state-wide event offers competition in dressage, show jumping, combined training and show horses.

Labelled as Western Australia's biggest equestrian event for riders in their primary and secondary years, Ashleigh said it was the biggest competition she had done to date.

"I became interested in horses through my family," she said.

"As I've gotten older, I've gotten more and more interested in competing."

Ashleigh placed in several classes over the three days of competition in the participation category, which puts riders through their paces without the added pressure of competing against the state's top riders.

"I placed fourth in jumping, fourth overall in working hunter and fifth in dressage," she said.

After showing her budding talent on the state stage, Ashleigh said she will continue to compete on her horse Baylaurel Panache.

College acting principal Steve Swallow said the College will look at expanding student involvement for its equestrian students.

"This is a fantastic result for both Ashleigh and the College," he said. "After discussions with the College's equine manager Elissa Forbes, we will look at expanding our equine program that we currently offer a Certificate II in Equine Studies for students."

"Performances in this year's event may also be used toward the 2019 state championships."

Young guns in the running

■ Yoko and Andries Mostert.

LOWER Denmark Road winemakers Yoko and Andries Mostert have been named in the Final 12 for a national Young Gun of Wine contest that will laud Australia's leading independent winemakers.

The competition is in its twelfth year and winners will be announced at an invitation-only ceremony at Hobart's MONA gallery on June 18.

For the top gong, the Mosterts of Brave New Wine will vie with two other Western Australian wineries, three from Tasmania, three from South Australia, two from Victoria and one from the ACT.

The Mosterts, whose wines include riesling and shiraz, are one of two husband-and-wife combos in the running.

National Volunteer Week
21-27 MAY, 2018Hooking
new skills

FISHABILITY Albany continues to provide regular recreational fishing opportunities for children and adults living with disabilities.

The activities program provides opportunities for participants of all ability levels and focuses on improving the health and wellbeing of members, developing self-confidence and growing social skills.

Fishability works with the community to promote fishing activities as a means of acceptance and inclusion with provision of inclusive and disability programs.

Fishability commenced operations in January 2014 and in a short time has grown exponentially.

Fishability activities are delivered on a weekly basis at Emu Point at no cost to the participant.

Last September, a partnership was established with the Princess Royal Sailing Club to introduce a boat activity on the 'Responder'.

This new initiative allows children and adults requiring support to experience recreational fishing from a boat purposefully modified to equip special needs.

To keep up with the demand for the activities, Fishability are recruiting more volunteers.

People who are interested in working in a team, providing service to the community, changing lives and being in the great outdoors would suit the role.

Fishability Executive Officer Di Bruce said the Albany Fishability program is an opportunity for people in the community who are thinking of becoming volunteers to connect with others.

■ The Fishability team.

"You can be part of a social network, make a difference in the lives of others and enjoy the surroundings of Albany, all while having a fish," she said.

"If you are looking for a volunteering opportunity, we would invite you to come along and observe and experience one of our activities, and I assure you that you will be hooked!"

If you are interested in volunteering with Fishability, call 0413 296 606 or email info.albany@fisherswithdisabilities.org.au.

Volunteer for life

FOR Albany and Regional Volunteer Service coordinator Tracy Sleeman, volunteering has been an integral part of her life from an early age.

Starting with being a Girl Scout and helping her mum, Helen Ralph, volunteer in the community, Ms Sleeman has continued to give back where she can.

"I grew up volunteering and it just comes naturally," she said.

"I still help with Red Cross. I was on the board for Albany Community Care for around seven or eight years.

"And I worked with some of the mums in Little Grove to get Mills Park running."

For National Volunteer Week next week, Ms Sleeman said there will be plenty of events for volunteers to expand their skills in the Great Southern.

"On Tuesday we'll have the Sundowner at the Albany Entertainment Centre," she said.

"Volunteering WA CEO Tina Williams will give a speech and we'll award the Mike Stidwell Medal for Outstanding Contribution to Sport Administration too."

For volunteers wanting to hone their baking skills, Ms Sleeman will hold baking classes Perfecting High Tea Recipes with Ms Ralph on the Friday and on June 1.

"We'll be teaching people how to bake sponges and scones," she said.

"It will be a great way for some volunteers to learn new skills."

Continuing from last year's Book a Brain program in Cranbrook and Tambellup, Ms Sleeman will hold workshops where volunteer mentors can be made available for advice on grant writing, budgeting, strategic planning and other similar applications.

"Volunteering gives back to community groups and to Albany as a whole," she said.

"Helping out where you can makes the community better for everyone."

To get involved with volunteering in Albany and the Great Southern, Ms Sleeman said people can head to the Albany and Regional Volunteer Service website.

"You can volunteer for an indefinite amount of time, or you can volunteer for a stand-alone event," she said.

"Volunteering is about connecting with other people and giving back to a good cause."

You can contact the Albany and Regional Volunteer Service to RSVP for the Sundowner on May 22 on 9841 3588 or contact the Albany Leisure and Aquatic Centre to RSVP for the Perfecting High Tea Recipes classes on 6820 3400.

Volunteer gives back to community

GRACE JONES

AFTER being in an industrial accident around 16 years ago and taking more than a few trips in an ambulance, St John Regional Training and Services Coordinator for the Great Southern Mitchell Harrison said volunteering helped him give back to the community.

Mr Harrison said he simply walked in to the St John Ambulance Sub Centre in Denmark 12 months after his accident and told them he wanted to get involved.

"I told them I was interested and they couldn't be any more enthusiastic," he said.

Since then Mr Harrison has spent 10 years travelling between Albany and Denmark to volunteer his services.

"Volunteering can be as flexible as you need it to be," he said.

To become a volunteer with St John, Mr Harrison said people need their first aid certificate, a police clearance and a drivers licence.

"We provide the rest of the training you need to be able to get in the ambulance," he said.

"After that we start you on observer shifts to get you comfortable and confident in what you're doing."

Mr Harrison said he would recommend volunteering to anyone that wants a way to give back to the community.

"We have some non-operational roles available," he said.

"And we'll have a Country Youth Ambulance Officer program starting this year for 16 to 18 year olds.

To volunteer with St John visit www.stjohnchangelives.com.au or visit your nearest regional centre.

Keeping time takes Kaye around the world

SWIMMING has taken Kaye Bolger all over the world, and she hasn't even got her feet wet.

events. "I've just come back from volunteering as a technical official at the Commonwealth Games," she said.

"I've been to Hawaii twice, to Auckland and to Samoa, all to volunteer as an official."

"I've met some amazing people and seen some amazing things as a volunteer."

Ms Bolger said that despite the time and money put in to reach her level three referee status, she wouldn't change her decision.

"I volunteer from regional competitions to national competitions," she said.

"But volunteering at a regional level is most rewarding. Kids start from somewhere, and being able to see their progression from a nipper to an Olympic standard in some cases is amazing."

"There are plenty of professional Australian swimmers out there that I can remember watching as kids."

To encourage others to get involved as volunteers with the Albany Swim Club, of which she is a member, Ms Bolger will be running courses in time-keeping. "Anyone can help out," she said.

"If we don't have volunteers, the sport won't survive and we owe it to the kids to have a chance at swimming competitively."

"These classes will get people started on their journey to referee events." To find out more about the courses you can contact the Albany Swim Club via their website.

ASHLEIGH FIELDING

THE ideal home for a new family, a couple or retirees has just become available in Little Grove, and it can provide the peaceful lifestyle sought by many.

This three-bedroom, two-bathroom 2015 build is neatly designed on a flat block and is in near-new condition.

Two of the bedrooms are connected to each other via an open space, which could work well as children's play area or teenage study space. These bedrooms are fitted with light plush carpets, fresh paint and have floor-to-ceiling sliding wardrobes.

These two bedrooms share a toilet and a bathroom with a bath, which are all designed with sleek, contemporary colours and finishes.

The master bedroom has a large walk-through wardrobe and a spacious ensuite, featuring a toilet, double shower and generous vanity.

There is a theatre room separate to the main living area, allowing different movies to be watched at once or giving the kids a sleepover hang-out spot.

The rear of the property has been designed to allow plenty of natural light in to brighten and warm the home.

The panoramic windows stretching around the open-plan living, dining and kitchen areas give you a complete view of the backyard, allowing you to entertain guests inside while keeping an eye on the kids playing outside.

The kitchen is geared with stainless steel fittings, a wide oven, a dishwasher and a butler's pantry.

The separate butler's pantry provides additional storage plus an extra food preparation bench.

The exterior of the property includes an undercover timber patio, a large lawn, vegetable garden boxes and established shrubbery.

This neat-as-a-pin home has the potential to attract many buyers with its quiet location, close proximity to town and Princess Royal Harbour, and waterside lifestyle.

The home will be open this Saturday, May 19 at 11am and be up for Elders Easy Auction on June 2 at 12pm, unless sold prior.

The exclusive agent for the property is Blair Scott from Elders Real Estate on 0459 024 026.

BRIGHT FUTURES

Principles foster lifelong learning

PARKLANDS School is a highly regarded independent school offering quality, caring education for children from toddlers to Year 6.

Parklands takes pride in providing a nurturing environment for children's crucial development stages, equipping them for learning in high school and beyond.

Playgroup and kindergarten programs follow Montessori principles and practices in delivering the Early Years Framework. The outstanding pre-primary and primary programs follow best practice in education to deliver the Australian curriculum.

Parklands' vision is to create a safe, cooperative learning community, foster a lifelong love of learning and a sense of wonder and joy, build respect for self and others, and live in harmony with the environment – natural, cultural and social.

Parklands runs two playgroup sessions a week on Tuesday and Thursday mornings.

The kindergarten program consists of a two year program with students commencing at the age of three in the pre-kindergarten program and then continuing into kindergarten as four year olds.

Students in pre-primary to Year 6 participate in Italian lessons, specialist music lessons and sport. Students are able to access Auslan classes, djembe drumming classes and choir.

Parklands staff are highly regarded for their outstanding ability and commitment to the care for the academic, emotional and social needs of students. All classrooms have a teacher and a support staff member. Being a small school enables all staff to know every student, which creates a safe, supportive learning environment for all.

Scholarship winners recognised

■ Nathan Pot with Jack Family Trust trustee Richard Gist.

UWA Albany acknowledged the academic excellence of its students at the annual Scholarship Recognition event recently. The University of Western Australia is proud of the high calibre of students that applied for the scholarships and is grateful to all the sponsors and donors who support the teaching, learning and research at the university.

Scholarships assist students to meet the financial challenges of university, as well as recognise their academic achievement.

"I'm really glad to have received this scholarship because it means that I don't need to worry as much about my own income at the moment, and it will allow me to have reduced costs to pay for my university fees, taking a lot of stress and worry that I might have in the future for trying to pay for my fees," said Jack Family Rural Scholarship recipient Nathan Pot.

"I am passionate about conserving our native flora and fauna, protecting our bushland and enjoying the outdoors. The Water Corporation Scholarship will help me by reducing the financial stress of full time study. I will also use the scholarship to obtain further qualifications to make myself more employable," said Kyle Wood.

Festival success

ASHLEIGH FIELDING

THE organising body for the Vancouver Street Festival has already received a stream of positive feedback following the event on the weekend.

Vancouver Arts Centre team leader Amber Cordon said the centre had received encouraging comments about the success of the festival from the public both in person and via email throughout the festival on Saturday and the days afterward.

"People were very happy," she said. "Everyone seemed to be having a great day; the crowds were significant."

"It was madness in the lead up to it, but the day itself was fantastic."

Ms Cordon said one of the highlights of the day was the new Noongar Song Project element, which included a mass choir song performance, a live band and a dance group.

"It was a fantastic performance," she said of the choir.

"To have local Noongar culture presented in such an engaging way was outstanding."

A couple of adjustments were made to the layout of this year's event, including moving more of the activities to the rear carpark and spreading out the artisan market.

Ms Cordon said these changes worked well and said the stallholders were happy with their positions along the street.

"The neighbours were great, too," she said.

"The whole festival just looked really pretty."

Ms Cordon said the street festival is just one of many projects VAC organises, and said the centre will continue with their other programs for now, and commence planning for next year's street festival in a couple of months.

Carvings on show

■ Aboriginal Community Learning Officer Vernice Gillies and Regional Manager Rachael Wilsher-Saa from the Museum of the Great Southern.

MULTIPLE generations of woodcarvers and painters will be among a group of indigenous artists exhibiting their Anangu culture-themed artwork displayed for the next three months at the Museum of the Great Southern.

The Punuku Tjukurpa exhibition opened last Friday and celebrates the stories and laws of the Anangu people - the traditional owners of Uru-Kata Tjuta and the surrounding land in the Northern Territory.

Artist Ninninga Lewis is part of the project and said she was happy to see the artwork travel among the broader community.

"It is good that our carvings should go out to the world for all to see," she said.

"People can see and understand how things are made and that we have a lot of memories [in our collection]."

Great Southern Museum regional manager Rachael Wilsher-Saa said Punuku Tjukurpa showcases a rich cultural history.

"There are 88 punu (carved objects made of wood) featuring burnt designs, sculptural works, 2D pieces and specially produced audio and video footage on display," she said.

"The mobile app that accompanies the exhibition also provides deeper engagement with the diverse works through audio descriptions of selected objects, a walking tour and educational activities."

Aboriginal Community Learning Officer for the Museum of the Great Southern Vernice Gillies said the exhibition is extremely important, as it brings a "wholly Aboriginal flavour" of artwork to Albany.

"To bring central Australia to all of Australia, and for [Anangu artists] to be able to share what they do with the rest of Australia... it's absolutely spectacular," she said.

"It's just stunning; I get shivers looking at it."

The exhibition will remain in Albany until July 29.

You can download the mobile app Ms Wilsher-Saa referred to by searching "Punuku Tjukurpa" in Google Play or the Apple Store.

Innovative tree change

ASHLEIGH FIELDING

EMERGING and established artists are being encouraged to submit an expression of interest into a City of Albany art project involving a dead tree in the Ellen Cove seating area.

In conjunction with Vancouver Arts Centre, the City is inviting people to take an "innovative approach" to making the tree a "permanent and exciting component" of the area.

Manager for City Reserves Jacqui Freeman said the tree recently died off and its roots are embedded in the seating area's retaining walls, so rather than try to remove it, she thought to put the idea out to the community to make the tree a point of interest.

"It's an opportunity for people who don't have their artwork out there to have a public art space," she said.

Vancouver Arts Centre team leader Amber Cordon said she is keen to hear from both emerging and established artists putting forward their ideas about how they would like to see the tree take shape.

"It's a really lovely family spot here," she said.

"So, we would be really interested to hear from art groups who want to work with community members, as well as see art designs sensitive to place, such as having a focus on the use of the area and cultural history."

"We welcome all artists, especially emerging artists."

The budget for the project is $2000 and the artwork must be completed by September 30.

You can express your interest by submitting your idea to indrag@albany.wa.gov.au or by handing in a hard copy by 4pm on May 26.

Shout out for Voice vollies

DENMARK Festival of Voice organisers are seeking more volunteers to take up the roles of MCs, venue managers and stage techies for the event planned for the June long weekend.

The annual Denmark Arts event promotes itself as a 'celebration of the power and beauty of the human voice' and this year has a line-up of more than 80 musical acts.

Festival manager Sofie Lines said Denmark Arts is hosting three free training courses for people who would like to volunteer - 'The Arts of Being an MC', 'Stage Tech 101' and 'Being a Venue Manager'.

"Every year, many valued volunteers take part in this beautiful event and bring with them renewed energy and inspiration, making the Denmark Festival of Voice the success that it is today," she said.

"Most volunteer positions for the festival itself have been filled already; however, the team are still looking for volunteers who are interested in playing a role as an MC, venue manager, helping with basic stage tech tasks and working in the Festival Hub."

Ms Lines said MCs would have the role of in-roducing acts and speakers, and maintaining a positive atmosphere.

"MCs act as the face of the festival, guiding the audiences to the interesting and exciting program surrounding them," she said.

To be a venue manager, Ms Lines said volunteers will be responsible for ensuring performances and workshops run according to plan.

"In this role, it is key to ensure the audience and participants are happy and the performers' needs are met," she said.

"They must also ensure the audience and performers are keeping to festival guidelines, and keep a handle on other important considerations, such as seating for elders in attendance and access for people with disabilities."

If you would like to volunteer at the Denmark Festival of Voice and attend a workshop, contact Denmark Arts on 9848 3623 or via email at admin@denmarkarts.com.au.

The 'Stage Tech 101' workshop will be held on May 19, the 'Being a Venue Manager' workshop on May 23 and the MC course on May 24.

Free business advice

WHETHER you have an idea for a new business, are considering buying an existing one, or already run your own business, you can get valuable guidance from a free session with one of the experienced advisers at the Small Business Centre Great Southern.

Advisers Vicki Brown and Richard Keeler have wide-ranging expertise on all aspects of business operation and management, and their assistance could save you lots of time – and pots of money!

Their extensive service is delivered through the WA Government's Business Local program and funded by the Small Business Development Corporation, so there is no cost to business operators. Vicki and Richard can advise on all aspects of business, including registration, leasing, work health and safety, business planning, marketing, business management and strategy, financial modelling and the complex area of employing and recruiting staff.

Vicki said she and Richard travel to all areas of the Great Southern and would hold consultations with clients outside normal business hours if necessary.

"We meet clients face-to-face, online or over the phone," Vicki said.

"And they can come to us or we will go to them – we're very flexible," she added. Hundreds of people from all 11 shires in the region use the service every year.

Vicki said they were often approached with a business concept.

"We listen to the idea, then we stand back and objectively assess the prospect before giving honest, realistic advice," Vicki said.

Vicki encourages people in business or those considering starting one to give the centre a call first and gain no-cost advice.

"There's no such thing as a silly question," she said.

"And if we don't know the answer, we know who does."

Seniors in focus

Dancercise for seniors

■ Dancercise instructor Michaela Anderson with dancers Jan Henry, Cherry Pearce and Jill Larsen.

"IT'S FUN, it's exhilarating and a fabulous way to start the day!"

This was the verdict from some of the enthusiastic seniors who took to the floor at the Senior Centres Centre on Tuesday morning for their Dancercise class.

Yoga and pilates instructor Michaela Anderson introduced the new Dancercise sessions a couple of months ago to cater for those who can't get down on the floor and want to stay on their feet.

"Dancing is a great way to keep you moving, and it is so much fun that you barely notice your creaking joints," she said.

"Dancing for exercise is also good for the brain because we practice and learn specific dance routines and patterns."

Participants are encouraged to exercise according to their ability and there is no pressure to be particularly coordinated. "I absolutely adore it," said Jill Larsen as she warmed up for this week's morning session. "The classes offer the ideal intensity and length, and at the end, I feel exhilarated but not exhausted."

New members are always welcome, and anyone interested in having a bit of fun and moving to some toe-tapping music can call 9841 2168 for more information.

The Senior Centres Centre in Grey Street West offers a wide range of programs, including pilates, carpet bowls, yoga, bingo and a social craft group.

— Anne Simpson

Find a hobby

KEEPING active and involved in the community is often a goal for people falling into the elderly age category, and Albany has many different activities on offer for seniors to be a part of.

These activities are not limited to solely seniors, but may just be that new hobby seniors are looking for.

The Old Farm Strawberry Hill is seeking volunteers to work as meet-and-greeters or as garden maintenance and landscapers.

This would be perfect for community members who enjoy Albany's heritage and sharing it with visitors. Contact Judy Williams on 0466 984 468 if you are interested. The Association of Independent Retirees meets once a month and their upcoming meeting will be held on May 28 at 2pm, at the Middleton Beach Bowling Club.

The over 50s cycling and walking groups meet every week around Albany, offering different routes for all ranges of abilities.

W&R A bigger, better Wellington & Reeves

advertising feature

■ Wellington & Reeves Sales and Marketing Manager Darren Leslie and Director Barry Panizza.

Real estate expansion

ALBANY real estate firm Wellington & Reeves has continued its push for greater market share with the expansion into a second sales office in the heart of Albany's CBD.

The business, which is celebrating its 70th birthday, recently acquired the portfolio of commercial and rental specialists Albany Elite Property, pushing the capacity of its sales and property management office at 197 York Street to the limit.

Directors Barry Panizza and Kathleen Meir said confidence in Albany's long-term vitality led them to pounce on the acquisition and the decision to open the doors to a second office on York Street. "It's an opportunity we've always been looking for, and when it arrived we were ready to act promptly," Mr Panizza said.

"We see a strong future in Albany and have the confidence to continue to invest," Ms Meir said. Sales and marketing manager Darren Leslie said Wellington & Reeves is currently the highest-ranking agency for listings and sales in the region and would continue its push for growth through its new main sales office.

"We now have the largest portfolio of residential rental properties," he said.

"In a climate where things are a bit negative, we're growing our business and we can do that with the confidence that we see a strong future for Albany."

"Our clients and prospective buyers gain the benefit of better exposure through the location of the office opposite the new Albany Tourism and Information Hub with increased window displays and a great looking, bright, new office."

■ Wellington & Reeves' Darren Leslie and Barry Panizza outside the new sales office on York Street.

ON & OFF THE ROAD

70,000 miles in a Model T

A LOT of classic, veteran and historic car owners are usually pretty reserved about how far and where they drive their precious and meticulously restored cars.

I know some blokes (and shelles) that pull out their car to drive down the road and back, some owners who won't take them out in the rain and some who only take them out to idle for a while and put them away again.

So when I heard about Dirk and Trudy Regter arriving in Albany with their 1915 Model T Ford and that they had driven around 70,000 miles (or 112,654km for us young ones) to get here, I was suitably surprised.

The Regters left the Netherlands in 2012 to drive around the globe to raise money for SOS Children's Villages International after fully restoring their Model T.

"I grew up with Model Ts," Dirk said.

"My grandfather had Model Ts and my father had Model Ts."

"I bought this car in Canada unrestored and it took me about three years to restore."

"I made hydraulic breaks for the rear end and put a big air filter on the carburettor to keep the dust out."

"I also drilled the crankshaft for better oil pressure on the main bearings."

Despite having an old car with tyres that look like they definitely wouldn't be able to go off the beaten track, Dirk and Trudy have so far visited Asia, South Africa, the US, Canada, South America, central Europe, New Zealand and now Australia.

"We go home after about six months of driving to spend time with the family," Dirk said.

"We've been very lucky to have no serious car troubles on our trip this far."

Dirk also couldn't help but marvel on how Australia was such a large country with a large passion for cars.

"The classic car world is very small so everyone knows each other," he said.

"The people from Albany got a call from another club to let them know we were coming."

"It has been like a wave of people calling each other saying 'they are coming, they are coming'."

"It's amazing."

TRAILBLAZERS

MAY is the start of the annual migration of grey nomads and keen fishers to the northern half of this great state. These trips take in all sorts of fishing from catching whiting and bream off a nice beach to the keenest fisher chasing some of the world's best sports fish and tasty northern bottom-dwellers.

One thing they all have in common is a long drive (unless you're lucky and you get to fly) and while the Northwest Coastal Highway is a very good road, it can catch the unwary out, and utmost care should be taken at all times. Some pre-planning and preparation is a must and here are a few ideas to keep all safe on the trip.

Now I hope we have all had our car checked by a mechanic before our trip, so let's assume (dangerous word that) our cars are in good order to start off with.

A good starter for getting things in place for a long trip is making sure the tyre pressure on all wheels including the spare are set to the correct level. If you're not sure what the correct pressure is for a long trip towing, ask the question of one of our local tyre suppliers and I am sure they will be more than willing to help.

While knowing that the basic things are in place for the trip if the car is more than three years old, it is worth carrying some basic spare fuses and radiator hoses and drive belts, plus a set of spare fuses and a small emergency tool kit.

The next item on the list is the boat trailer or caravan. Unlike the car, many people don't get these checked by a mechanic regularly. So, start with the basics that we can all do.

Check that all the lights work and the tyre pressure is correct, and if you're doing the North West Coastal Highway trip I would suggest a visit to your boat or caravan mechanic to get the wheel bearings and the braking system checked to make sure they are in good working order.

One thing that many people forget is to have the correct jack and wheel brace to change the wheel on whatever they're towing – basic you would think, but you would be surprised how many times people need help with this basic breakdown.

I strongly believe we as drivers of vehicles towing vans and boats have a duty to other road users not to hold them up. This can even happen if you do the top speed permitted while towing. Be aware of what is going on behind you and consider pulling over (when safe) and letting the other cars and trucks past you, especially if you are using Indian Ocean Drive, as no one wants to be involved in a major accident.

On this subject, make sure your mirrors are suitable for towing and give you a good view of what you're towing and what is coming up behind you.

■ It's okay to pull over.

There is nothing worse than toddling along at your chosen speed and suddenly finding a road train next to you. I don't want to scare people off from doing the trip, but a bit of planning and common sense can make it a lot more enjoyable and safe.

Railways unbeaten

■ Railways' Zane Marwick finds himself in space in the match against Royals.

RAILWAYS have jumped to an early lead on the Great Southern Football League ladder following their 73-point win over Royals and remain unbeaten after three rounds.

The Tigers led at every change on Saturday and had the match in the bag at half time with a 44-point lead.

Despite being held to a single goal in the third quarter by Royals, Railways turned it on in the final term with six goals to win 14.16 (100) to 3.9 (27).

Mount Barker Bulls had a convincing 47-point win over Denmark Walpole and sit in third place on the ladder by percentage to North Albany.

Forward Kym Monteath added to his tally for the season with five goals to lead the goal kicking and set up the Bulls' 15.8 (98) to 7.9 (51) win.

North Albany boosted their percentage with a 137-point victory over Albany under lights at Collingwood Park on Friday night.

Kangas ended the match with 11 goal scorers as they kicked away from Sharks in the second half.

North Albany midfielder Matt Orzel relished the night-time match and topped the best players list with his three goals adding to his dominant display.

Harper defies gravity for state win

PINT-sized mountain bike star Harper O'Donnell is in contention to take out the Under 13 division of the WA Gravity Enduro series following his state championship win earlier this month.

The 12-year-old St Joseph's College student said his latest run at The Goat Farm in Darlington was one of his favorite tracks he had competed on so far.

"There were so many different trials you could do that you didn't know exactly what to expect," he said.

"Some parts of the track had cool names too, like the Dugite Bite or the Pulmonary Embolism."

"And there were heaps of jumps, which I really like."

With two major wins under his belt and only four rounds to go, Harper said he had a chance to take out the title.

"I would like to win the overall series next," he said.

"They take your five highest rankings and tally the points for the winner."

Harper has been pushing the pedals for a few years now, but it wasn't until his dad Paul introduced him to the world of mountain bike competition last year that he started to get more serious.

■ Harper O'Donnell.

"Dad and I started doing cross country and downhill stuff together with the Albany Mountain Bike Club," he said.

"I don't really get scared," he said.

"There's times where you come up to a big jump and you might be a bit worried, but you just have to do it."

Harper's next round will be closer to home this time, with Pemberton Mountain Bike Park hosting the next stage on June 10.

8 easy ways to stay in shape when travelling

By AMBER CEKEREVAC
Owner BodyCare Health Club

WHETHER you're away for business or pleasure, the chances are that you already know where you're going before you set foot on the plane or hop in the car.

And there you have it. The key to success is planning ahead.

Staying in shape when travelling is easier than ever. Never before have we had access to so much information. There are healthy food options, training plans and information on your destination right at your fingertips.

Here are a few tips to help you on your journey:

1. Locate the closest supermarket to where you're staying. You'll have access to fresh fruit and veg, plus ingredients to make healthy snacks and even meals. And, if it's within walking distance, you're moving too.
2. Choose accommodation with access to a kitchenette. This gives you access to a fridge, stove, and microwave, where you can heat up or cook healthy meals. The money you save by eating in far outweighs the money spent eating out.
3. Stay active and go exploring. Walk, run or make use of the hotel gym. You'll feel more refreshed the next day, improving productivity.

4. Drink water to keep you hydrated, especially if you're flying to your destination or spending time in air-con. You'd be surprised how easy these can leave you parched. Drinking water will keep you feeling better, more energetic, and more inclined to stay active.

5. Enjoy the local culinary traditions, but sharing it with your partner means you can enjoy the great taste, cutting calories in half!

6. Prepare your own snacks. Nobody likes you when you're hungry. It's effortless to eat out or buy snacks wherever you go, but it's also very easy to put on a few quick kilos this way too.

7. Eating a meal high in protein will help your body maintain lean muscle mass AND keep you satisfied to reduce those cravings for typically high-carb and fatty foods.

8. Skip the buffet breakfast, which is traditionally high in carbs and fat. When possible, ensure your first meal of the day has a good balance of protein, carbohydrates and fats to keep you going for longer.

If you enjoy everything in moderation (while ticking the boxes above), you'll easily stay in shape on your next holiday.

Kangas inaugural premiers

GRACE JONES

NORTH Albany has become the inaugural Great Southern Womens Football League premiers after a nail-biting five-point win over Royals on Friday night, 6.4 (40) to 5.5 (35).

Kangas coach Jason Cordon said the team did well under the pressure of the grand final against an undefeated Royals side.

"It was pretty nerve-wracking in the final quarter," he said.

"We didn't have any substitutes at all so the girls had to run the game down.

"Royals had about eight extra girls to sub in and out.

"Overall though the girls did really well."

For the first season of women's football in Albany, Cordon said all teams had an expectation on how the season needed to run.

"There's really good spirit between the teams," he said.

"We have girls aged from 13 to 30 and everyone treats each other well on the field.

"The older ladies know the younger ones are out there and tone down their tackles.

"We really couldn't afford for anyone to get hurt."

Cordon said having two matches played on the Friday night created a great atmosphere of supporters and spectators.

"By half time we would have four teams' worth of spectators," he said.

"Whoever thought of doing it that way was a genius.

"You don't really see that in the men's games.

"Overall the atmosphere from the spectators makes the night feel like what footy was back in the 70s and 80s.

"The ladies weren't refined on the field like the men's teams; it was all raw.

"I think it's the purest form of football you can get at the moment."

Albany and Mount Barker battled it out for the pairs competition, with John Robertson and Donald King bringing home the win for Albany.

Pope took on Walpole's Graeme Becker in singles and left victorious while Albany won the triples round thanks to a second appearance from King alongside Geoff Bain and Bill O'Meara.

With the season coming to a close, Bain said Denmark Bowling Club will continue social bowls in the off season.

"We'll have our closing meeting soon and then that's it for the season for the league," he said.

"We'll start up again in around September to October.

"People are more than welcome to have a go at social bowls in the meantime."

Close results for B1 comp

ALBANY Netball Association's B1 division featured a close contest between Kangas 12 and Bullets 4 on Saturday as they battled out a 35-all draw.

Kangas 12 coach Jean Davis said Bullets used their height advantage to play in front and command the Bullets shooters, including Libby Meill, who piled on 19 goals for her team.

Kangas' Lize-Marie Swarts worked hard against the Bullets attack, limiting the effect of the height difference.

Bullets' Paris Wallinger and Violet Heffernon-Backshell also played great games and helped their team come from nine points down to scrape through with the draw.

Denmark Magpies fought hard but were overrun by Kangas 13 in their matchy that ended with a 18-44 scoreline.

Kangas 13 coach Narda Street said both teams fought hard for the ball on Saturday, but a strong defensive combination of Charlotte Johnson, Freya Kellow-Anderson and Montana De Agonisti kept the Magpies at bay.

Kangas shooters Amity Byatt and Jazelle Fogins worked well alongside mid-court players Devon Proudfoot, Elsie Steele and Fleur Welshman, with all exhibiting strong passing and leading as they fed into the circle.

Grammar 7 and Royals Saints 8 enjoyed a thriller, with Royals taking the win by the narrowest of margins, 40-39.

Breakthrough win

GRACE JONES

ALBANY Golf Club's newest mens champion, Shayne Griskonis, was awarded his perpetual trophy last week, following his narrow win over Ricky Weight earlier this month.

Despite the wild weather, Griskonis managed to bag his first major win at the club during the 36-hole championship.

"I've been a member at the club for about seven years," he said.

"Before that I was just mucking around and having a bit of a hack."

Griskonis said the transition from having a bit of fun on the weekend to competing at the club was easy after joining the AGC.

"Myself and three of my mates joined the club and started playing more regularly," he said.

"We started playing some smaller comps to get our handicap and that was it.

"I've had some great support from the club over the years."

Griskonis wasn't a stranger to competing in a tournament when he teed off at the May 6 event, having won smaller competitions in the past.

"I've won a trip to Bali from the club and a free year of membership that was around $1500 at the time," he said.

"I've been quite fruitful in competition thus far.

"This is the biggest individual win I've had."

Having come runner-up for the championship in the past, Griskonis said he was proud of his achievement.

"It was very tough out there," he said.

"I definitely played some bad shots and so did my competitors.

"It was pretty close all day though."

Griskonis said that while he enjoys the competition, he doesn't plan his future events.

"I just have fun with it, and don't take it too seriously."

In other grades of the competition, Sean Millhaisen won the A Grade Plate and veteran player Noel Sewell runner-up in the 18-hole competition.

B Grade champion James Smits came out on top against runner-up Ian Skalko, with Rob Leonard named C Grade champion and Kim Sounness as runner-up.

Next up on the Albany Golf Club Calendar will be the Men's Open Day, hosted by the club on June 10.
