■ Flinders Park Primary year six students Rhyan Beckett-Kitson, Maggie Staude, Emmy Radford, Savannah Coleman-Combes, Ryan Scottford and Merrick Watts are representing their school at today's commemorative service.

Students remember

SCHOOL students from across the Great Southern are congregating in Albany's city centre this morning for a combined schools commemoration to mark 100 years since the signing of the Armistice that ended World War I.

The service is one of many being held in Albany over the next four days in the lead-up to Remembrance Day.

It also winds up school involvement with Anzac Albany celebrations, which began in 2014 and 2015 to commemorate 100 years since the commencement of WWI and the Gallipoli landing.

Flinders Park Primary year six students Merrick Watts, Maggie Staude and Savannah Coleman-Combes are three of more than 100 from their school attending the service and said they all felt honoured and proud to be part of it.

"It feels good to be part of Armistice because all of these people fought for us, which is pretty important," Merrick said.

"This is my first ever service so I'm really excited and really grateful that the soldiers fought for us," Savannah added.

"It's a great privilege," Maggie said.

Cancer cash raincheck

CHRIS THOMSON

STATE Health Minister Roger Cook says a tender for cancer radiotherapy equipment in Albany will not be let any time soon, despite a $6.6 million Federal commitment.

In Parliament on Tuesday, Nationals WA Leader Mia Davies asked if the State was "committed to fully funding the facility to house this equipment" and whether the WA Country Health Service (WACHS) had commenced a business case for the facility.

In response, Mr Cook told his Labor colleague, Legislative Assembly Speaker and Member for Albany Peter Watson there was a "Federal election in the wind and ... promises of funding in different parts of the community I guess, as part of that process".

"Tis the season," he gibed.

"From that perspective, we welcome the Federal Government's proposal to purchase the equipment associated with this particular machine.

"But, Mr Speaker, some people have said that this is similar to providing someone with a saddle but no horse.

Mr Cook said it was one thing to buy the equipment but "the lion's share" of the expense would be a bunker to house it and recurrent costs of operating it.

"Our most recent experience in terms of funding the construction of a bunker for this equipment was around about $14 million, which was the experience back in 2009 in Bunbury," he said.

"So, Mr Speaker, the offer is welcome and we are looking very closely at it."

He said WACHS was a "long way away from" advertising a tender for the radiotherapy equipment.

From that, Ms Davies concluded the machine would not be operational by June 2019, as originally slated by Federal Member for O'Connor Rick Wilson.

"Can you give an undertaking to this House and the people of Albany and the Great Southern that the McGowan Labor Government has a commitment to improving cancer treatment to the patients affected in that region?" she posed.

Mr Cook said: "We are certainly committed to having a look to make sure it makes sense".

"I understand that the Federal Member for that area has got political ambitions, and I'm sure they're related to the political cycle that we're in, but as we've observed before, Mr Speaker, you can front up with a bit of cash to buy the equipment but there's a vast amount of expense that's associated with that," he vollied.

"But we'll certainly keep having a look at that and make sure that if there can be a viable business case put around it that we'll get on board pretty quick smart."

Until Mr Wilson announced a $6.6 million grant for radiotherapy equipment through The Weekender ("Cancer funding coup", 13 September), WACHS had continually stated such equipment was off the table for Albany until at least 2024.

His announcement came after sustained coverage here of Denmark resident Mary Williams' ongoing battle to secure the radiotherapy equipment for Albany.

Schools reflect

Principal Richard Bushell said the event gives students the opportunity to reflect on how peace is key in the Australian way of life.

"It's important to help the younger generations understand the narrative," he said.

"And for them to realise people gave the ultimate sacrifice for our freedom."

The Armistice school event, which will include 26 schools from the Great Southern, will begin with a parade on York Street at 10am before the students assemble in the Anzac Peace Park for the 10.30am service.

During the service, 100 students will uncover the stories behind the names on the war memorial, and hold the names and photos of each soldier in a cross formation.

Drawing a winner

NINE-year-old Albany girl Charlize Senwick recently scored herself a brand new $500 bike when she took out first place in a statewide drawing competition.

Charlize was involved in an RAC bike safety course at school when she learned of the TravelSmart Competition, which invited RAC Little Legends Club members to draw a picture of how they stay safe on their bikes.

Charlize drew herself walking her bike safely on a bike path.

She said she was "really excited" when her mum read out the email stating her entry had won.

"I really wanted to do it but I knew it wasn't about winning, it was about having fun," Charlize said.

"I was smiling really big when Mum told me; I had a giant smile."

Charlize said she got to pick out her winning bike, which is a bit too big for her now but she will be ready for when she is a bit taller.

She chose a turquoise-coloured bike as that is her favourite colour, because if she had gotten pink, she "would have been sad".

Hammond's hammer

AN ALBANY councillor has volunteered to skill up to auction off items at Fossicker's Tip Shop at the Hanrahan Road dump.

In a report to councillors, City Waste Sustainability Officer Julie Passmore has recommended Cr Hammond's induction as a volunteer auctioneer be approved.

Ms Passmore advises that Cr Hammond has offered his services free of charge and to register as an accredited auctioneer at his own cost.

At a recent meeting, Cr Hammond suggested income could be increased by occasionally auctioning goods. He has since approached City CEO Andrew Sharpe to offer his services.

Ms Passmore's recommendation was set to be debated by a city committee last night, ahead of consideration by the council at a later date.

Garden fair refusal

PLANS by Albany entrepreneur Wayne Monks to extend his Kalgan Harvest Summer Fair from one to four weekends a year have been dealt a savage blow.

The fair, held on January 27 this year, offered live music, market stalls, viewing of alpacas and peacocks, garden tours and face painting.

On the back of that, an application to host the fair four times a year was lodged, knocked back by City planners and appealed in the powerful State Administrative Tribunal.

The tribunal invited the City to reconsider its knockback, and in August urban planners approved a revised application for one fair a year.

But a report now before councillors says that in September Mr Monks argued before the tribunal that one fair a year was not enough.

In the report, planner Jessica Anderson says Mr Monks asked for a Spring and Summer fair instead, with no requirement to go through the City's events approval process.

The tribunal again invited the City to reconsider its decision.

However, in a recommendation to City councillors, Ms Anderson recommends the two-fair scenario be refused, due in part to the character of Kalgan and the amount of traffic likely to be generated.

A City committee was set to consider the recommendation last night, ahead of a final decision by the full council in the fullness of time.

Health centre land deal

GRACE JONES

A NEW health centre in Bremer Bay is one step closer to fruition following Jeramungup shire council's decision to reserve a block of land for the development at no cost to WA Country Health Service (WACHS).

The Council's unanimous decision to offer the use of the 5000sqm Garnett Road block paved the way for a business case to be presented to the State Government to secure funding.

In council documents presented to the Council's October 17 meeting, WACHS regional director David Naughton said that having the land donated in-kind was crucial to the development of the new health centre.

"Securing such private land at no cost to WACHS is a key part of the project," he wrote.

Shire CEO Martin Cuthbert said the allocation of the block would allow WACHS to finish their business case to get the ball rolling for a new centre to be built.

The centre is slated to replace the seaside town's 30-year-old nursing post. "The existing post is definitely past its use by date and not really suitable to be used anymore," Mr Cuthbert said.

"There are issues with privacy and the nurse has to play the radio loudly to drown out confidential conversations."

Mr Cuthbert said developing a new health centre in Bremer Bay was something the locals needed and wanted.

"We're attempting to expand and develop our health and aged care facilities to keep people in Bremer Bay," he said.

"There's a large portion of the town's population that are retirees and with the existing infrastructure, a lot leave to places like Albany so they can have better access to health professionals."

"We want to keep people around long-term and look after our aging and youth populations."

Mr Cuthbert said locating the health centre in Bremer Bay is developing town centre was part of the bigger picture.

"We want to grow Bremer Bay and with this town centre we're hoping we can convince people to buy and build in the town," he said.

"We have the skate park there already, we'll have a new library, a shire office for our development service staff, the new health centre and six more units for the aged care facility."

"It's exciting times. The Council has been planning and preparing this for a long time and to see it come to fruition is nice to see."

A WACHS spokesperson said a business case for the health centre was being developed for consideration in the 2019/20 budget.

The race that stops education

WHILE the nation stopped for a horse race at Flemington on Tuesday, all bets were off in the undercover area at Albany's St Joseph's College.

Packed in like sardines in the undercover area around a soft track with a rating of 5, the primary school students cheered their favourites home for the prestigious St Joseph's Cup.

The piggy-back race that stops a school has been held for as long as the teachers can remember and offers a slight twist on the usual Melbourne Cup fervor.

Head of Junior School Erica Mielsens said there was a last-minute change of track.

"This year we had to bring it to the undercover area because of the rain. It would have been mayhem on the wet grass otherwise," she said.

The cup features Year One students as jockeys and Year Sixes as steeds.

ALBANY officials have bent the ear of their State counterparts on plans for a ring road west of the city and to power the municipality from 100 per cent renewable energy.

Mayor Dennis Wellington told The Weekender that on Friday he met with Transport Minister Rita Saffioti on her home turf in West Perth.

"The business plan and everything that needed to be done has now gone in to the Federal Government (for Commonwealth funding)."

■ Kit McLeod and jockey Tarkyn Hack cross the line ahead of Connor Bennett and Heath Ward.

"It's a bit of fun and something the students all look forward to each year," Ms Mielsens said.

"Students used to race piggy-back style [on their feet] but because of health and safety we had to change it to the horses being on their hands and knees instead."

"All the students have been jockeys once upon a time, so I think they look forward to getting to Year Six and being the horse."

Jockey Tarkyn Hack brought home thoroughbred Kit McLeod to hold the cup aloft. A lap of honour ensued before the students got back to work.

City tunes State on road, power projects

ALBANY officials have bent the ear of their State counterparts on plans for a ring road west of the city and to power the municipality from 100 per cent renewable energy.

Mayor Dennis Wellington told The Weekender that on Friday he met with Transport Minister Rita Saffioti on her home turf in West Perth.

"The business plan and everything that needed to be done has now gone in to the Federal Government (for Commonwealth funding)."

"Main Roads is continuing with the design work, so that when the funding does come through it should be shovel-ready."

Mr Wellington said that was an improvement on "where we had been" but Ms Saffioti did not indicate when State funding might become available.

Meanwhile, the Board of Western Power met in Albany on Monday, the first time it had convened outside Perth since the mid 1990s.

"We invited them down to have a look and had a discussion about what we want to do and they were very receptive in terms of what we are trying to achieve," Mr Wellington said.

Albany's plans to power the city entirely from renewable energy.

Lifejackets on trend

ASHLEIGH FIELDING

SKIPPERS navigating and fishing in the Southern Ocean are encouraged to continue the positive trend of wearing lifejackets that fishing body Recfishwest says has been growing over the past five years.

Recfishwest CEO Andrew Rowland said he is seeing more lifejackets being worn now than ever, with people "even walking across the car park" to their boat with their slim-line lifejackets on.

"We weren't seeing that five years ago," he said.

With the increase in positive behaviour around wearing lifejackets identified by Recfishwest, Dr Rowland welcomed a recent statement by Department of Transport Operations Manager Noel Chambers, which recommended lifejackets be worn at all times, particularly beyond Bald Head.

Mr Chambers said conditions varied in open ocean and lifejackets were key in keeping people afloat and alive.

"There can be vastly different conditions experienced in the relatively protected waters of King George Sound compared with the open waters of the Southern Ocean," he said.

"The changes in conditions mean skippers can experience rough and hazardous seas.

"In an emergency there is often not time to put on a lifejacket...it is recommended lifejackets are worn at all times."

Dr Rowland said the Southern Ocean is a "different beast" that "must be respected".

"Vessel owners must take ultimate responsibility for themselves and their crew," he said.

"It's not all about lifejackets – it's about understanding your boat's ability, your ability as a skipper, making sure your boat is seaworthy and checking weather conditions before leaving home.

"We want to see everyone in WA return home safe after a day out fishing and wearing a slim-line comfy lifejacket is part of that – they are designed to be worn, not stowed away."

The Old4New program, which offers vouchers for use at local retail outlets to buy a new lifejacket in exchange for old or obsolete lifejackets, will be at the Albany Agricultural Show this weekend.

Police to scope firearms

IN THE wake of Narrogin Police seizing more than 70 unsecured firearms and ammunition from a Narrogin gun collector's property, Great Southern District police inspector Danny Vincent announced on Tuesday a new operation targeting complacent firearm owners.

Operation Bluesun began on Monday and will continue for six weeks, and will involve police officers conducting security inspections and physical audits of selected firearm owner's properties. Inspector Vincent said the focus of the proactive operation is community safety and educating firearm owners.

"Unfortunately, what we're finding is firearm owners who are not aware of their responsibilities," he said.

"One of our biggest concerns is firearms falling into the wrong hands.

"So a big part of this operation is preventing firearm thefts."

Inspector Vincent said firearm owners can find out how to comply with firearm storage legislation by visiting police.wa.gov.au or by contacting their local police station.

Operation Bluesun will be assessed at the end of the initial six-week period to decide whether it will continue.

Flood dispute settled

A WOMAN embroiled in a decade-long dispute over flooding at her Yakamia property has reached a secret out-of-court settlement with the City of Albany, according to the council's CEO.

"Details of the settlement are confidential," City of Albany boss Andrew Sharpe said of the end of his organisation's tortious legal tussle with Catherine Ziverts.

"The City has remained committed to getting a resolution so both parties can move on.

"Previous attempts by the City to settle the case were unsuccessful, with Ms Ziverts exercising her right to choose to continue to pursue the matter through the courts."

Ms Ziverts launched civil action against the City after her Beaufort Road property from 2007 suffered severe damage she claimed was caused by faulty drainage and subsequent flooding of Yakamia Creek.

The Weekender recently revealed that her bid to adjourn a trial she had brought to the Supreme Court, due to stress she had been facing, was knocked back ("D-day for flood feud", 13 September).

She had asked that the trial, then slated to last for 12 days from October 15, be adjourned for at least three months.

At the time, she described the trauma she had experienced in dealing with evidence, and her difficulties preparing her case since the end of May when her former solicitors ceased to act.

Mr Sharpe said insurers had provided legal representation under the City's insurance policy.

Ms Ziverts was contacted for comment.

■ An artist's impression of the potential new look for Middleton Beach.

Picnic table panic abated

AN ALBANY city official has assured Middleton Beach goes the landmark green picnic tables near Ellen Cove will remain in situ when the foreshore receives a multi-million dollar facelift, despite a render of the new look not including them.

A landscape plan containing new artist's impressions of the foreshore was due to be considered by a City of Albany committee last night before a final decision by the full council at a later date.

The plan shows a render of the foreshore that displays tiered grassed terraces where picnic benches currently reside.

The render does not include the green timber picnic tables that have been at the beach for years.

But a City spokesperson told The Weekender the tables would not be removed.

"A summary of the design approach on page three of the ... plan clarifies the retention of the Norfolk Pine trees, established grassed areas, grassed terraces and Ellen Cove Jetty to maintain the foreshore's existing usage and character ... and additional grassed terraces to create an amphitheatre overlooking the beach environment," he said.

"Further, the diagram on page five of the plan reinforces this, clearly showing the existing terraces and existing trees and the area that will feature new terraces.

"This diagram is a more accurate representation of the proposed layout of the existing and new terraced areas."

The spokesperson also said woodcarver Darrel Radcliffe's new tree carving, unveiled last month in the picnic table area, would not be affected by the redevelopment.

The spokesperson said the current renders were only concept plans.

Dog policy off leash

CHRIS THOMSON

DOGS running free on Albany's beaches have raised passions among 90 people who commented on a new policy to demarcate where and how canines are allowed to exercise.

A paper prepared by City managers Jacqui Freeman and Stuart Jamieson recommends the draft policy – which aims to ban man's best friend from areas including Ellen Cove to Surf Beach, much of Emu Point Beach and Centennial Oval – be approved.

A submission by the Middleton Beach Group supports the continued banning of dogs from Ellen Cove and other main swimming and play areas.

Another submitter says an existing "dog-free area" at Chynes Beach needs to be added to the policy.

A third submitter tells of a harrowing stroll on Middleton Beach where they and their chihuahua and four-month-old baby were accosted by two labradors.

"We were walking back when two dogs approached us," the beach walker recalls.

"They were playing with our dog, then things started to get a bit serious.

"I could tell our dog was no longer having fun but very scared as these dogs were tumbling her and nipping at her."

The submitter says the chihuahua sounded like it was in pain.

"I was holding my baby in case they tried to jump up on me," the submitter continues.

"My dog begged me to pick her up, which I did, then I felt fearful the dog would jump up while I had the baby.

"In the distance walking parallel the lady owner came strolling along the beach [and] definitely saw I was in distress but made no attempt to call her dogs and when I approached her she didn't believe her dogs were being rough."

The draft policy nominates the Emu Point Marina beach, all green fields in the broader Centennial park area, and Surfers Beach to Firth Street as areas where dogs can run free.

An Emu Point resident says some dog owners in the area "flout the current signs".

"Much of the time the dogs are unleashed, are running around the grassed areas and are being allowed in the water at the main swimming area," the resident recounts, before adding that at Eyre Park in Middleton Beach recently a large, unleashed dog raced around the playground.

"I feed on one of the children's seats.

A Middleton Beach Group member laments that while promenading their pooch on Surfers Beach they often pick up "about a kilo of dog poo each morning – over and above my little dog's contribution".

Also under the draft policy, dogs must be kept on a leash at Frenchman Bay, Nananarup Beach and Rusty Point.

The draft was due to be considered by a City committee last night, before a final decision by the full council at a later date.

Carnegie connection

CHRIS THOMSON

ALANNAH MacTiernan's involvement with Carnegie before it was selected to erect a $65 million wave energy plant at Albany has again come under Parliamentary scrutiny.

Construction of the plant was to have started last week, but has been indefinitely delayed after Carnegie renegotiated its first funding milestone with the State when changes to federal tax incentives made the project less viable.

High profile CEO Mike Ottaviano resigned on September 28, the day the renegotiation was announced.

In early October, the Government agreed to cough up $2.625 million, half of Carnegie's first milestone payment.

Payment of the outstanding half is now contingent on Carnegie, by the end of 2018, demonstrating it has capacity to complete the project.

Last week, in response to a parliamentary question by Member for Warren-Blackwood Terry Redman, Premier Mark McGowan tabled the agenda of a 19-attendee meeting held in Albany on June 9, 2017.

At the meeting were Regional Development Minister Ms MacTiernan, her media advisor Mark Scott and then policy advisor Julie-Anne Gray. Albany MLA Peter Watson and Great Southern Development Commission CEO Bruce Manning. Also there were Dr Ottaviano, representatives of two other wave energy companies, and a phalanx of other bureaucrats, political advisors and University of Western Australia staff.

Earlier, on May 22 last year, at Ms MacTiernan's invitation, she and her then advisors Ms Gray, Matt Keogh and Cole Thurley met solely with Dr Ottaviano and two of his Carnegie colleagues.

Ahead of that meeting, Ms Gray reminded Ms MacTiernan of Labor's election promise to "work with UWA, Carnegie Clean Energy and other stakeholders to develop a Wave Energy Centre of Excellence in Albany".

Asked last week by Opposition Legislative Council leader Peter Collier why she met Carnegie before the project was awarded to the firm, Ms MacTiernan said the company had worked on a business case under the previous Barnett government.

"It was clearly the most advanced wave energy technology company in WA," she said in Parliament.

Mr Collier then asked why Ms MacTiernan had worked with "UWA, Carnegie Clean Energy and other stakeholders to develop" the wave centre "prior to undertaking an appropriate tender process".

Ms MacTiernan said "engaging with relevant industry stakeholders and undertaking market sounding" during the tender development stage was "generally accepted as best practice procurement".

Ms MacTiernan, a political advisor, and two Department of Primary Industries and Regional Development staff met solely with three Carnegie staffers on October 2, four days before the company's success was announced at a press conference at Sandpatch, overlooking the site of the proposed plant.

■ Director of UWA's Oceans Institute Erika Techera, Mike Ottaviano, Alannah MacTiernan and Peter Watson at Sandpatch last October for the wave farm announcement.

Earlier in October, heated debate over the wave plant dominated the first day of debate after Parliament resumed following the Spring school holidays (Govt swamped on Carnegie payment), 11 October.

In January last year, above a photograph of Mr McGowan and Mr Watson, Labor's plan for Albany said the party would help establish a wave farm.

"Carnegie Energy is now trialing the world's first renewable micro grid power station using wave energy as one of its sources," the plan, signed by Mr McGowan, said.

"The trial is successful, the micro grid model could be used in Albany, powering thousands of households with renewable energy."

In June last year, Ms MacTiernan told Parliament that "immediately after" her appointment as minister she divested a minority stake she had held in Carnegie's third-biggest shareholder.

An industry participation plan updated by Carnegie on October 4 as a requirement of the $2.625 million half-milestone payment reveals that 55 on-site jobs were expected at the peak of the project's construction phase. The Weekender asked Carnegie whether these jobs were all planned for Albany as suggested by 'on-site', but did not receive a reply.

The plan estimates the plant's capital cost to be $65 million, and says Carnegie will work with the Great Southern Development Commission to link up with Albany-based suppliers.

Exodus of elders

CHRIS THOMSON

IT'S been an early retirement hotspot since the 1970s, but Denmark is facing an exodus of older residents say the presidents of the Shire and its ratepayers' association.

Denmark Ratepayers and Residents Association President Beverley Ford said she hoped a private provider could be lured to open up more aged care beds in the leafy locale.

"The Association is calling for increased aged care," she said.

"Forty-three percent of the population is over the age of 55, so over the next 20 years there will be lots of people moving into that over-70 age group."

Mrs Ford said if another aged care facility could be attracted, 50 jobs would be created.

"The tragedy at the moment is that we only have 15 residential aged care beds in town," she said.

"And they only become vacant when somebody dies."

She said there were couples in Denmark who had been together for 60 or 70 years whose options were severely limited when it came time for one partner to go into care.

"You may be able to get one of the couple into Albany, but if the other one can't drive it may as well be 1000km away," she said.

"So, they either have to give up their friends and their home here and move to Albany, or usually what happens is that's too hard so they pack up and both go to Perth."

Shire President Ceinwen Gearon said a key issue was Denmark's absence of dementia care.

"We need to be able to work with care providers to deliver care that is provided in the community," she said.

"It's pretty clear from the community strategic plan for Denmark 2027 that the community does care about this."

She said the Shire had been talking to several service providers to determine where good spots for aged care might be.

The issues of aged care and homelessness in the Shire will be discussed at a meeting of the Association at 7pm on November 14 at the Denmark Hotel.

Amaroo Care Services CEO David Fenwick will outline his company's ideas for more aged care facilities in the area, and Councillor Gearon will update members on council activities.

Annual membership of the Association costs $10. You can sign up on the night, and bring a beer or SSB into the meeting with you.

Sub centre turns 80

EIGHT decades of community emergency service will be celebrated by the Denmark St John Sub Centre tomorrow with a vehicle parade and the opening of the newly refurbished ambulance centre.

St John regional manager Cassandra Hughes said the 80th birthday will recognise the growth and contribution of the St John sub centre in Denmark and give residents a chance to peek into the new facility.

"The Denmark sub centre has grown significantly over the last 80 years since it held its first meeting on February 11, 1938," she said.

"The centre and volunteers are excited to be able to welcome the public, celebrate Denmark's rich history and showcase the new facility."

Within two months of opening in 1938, Ms Hughes said then-chairman Bert Thorne, deputy chairman Bill Morgan and secretary Mr L. Brown had grown the committee to 11 members.

After a year of fundraising, a second-hand motorised ambulance was purchased in 1940 from Narrogin for £80 and land was later purchased for a new building in 1942.

"In 1975, the ambulance was replaced with a new model and named The Wally Gillingham to acknowledge his contributions," Ms Hughes said.

■ The Denmark sub centre back in the day.

"Five years later, an additional knowledge the three men who had served the Denmark community for over 113 years."

"At this time, the sub centre building was extended and an additional garage constructed to house the new ambulance."

"In 1981, the sub centre was named The Fred Holmwood Centre.

"It is an honour to be able to acknowledge the three men who had served the Denmark community for over 113 years."

The 80th birthday celebrations will kick off from noon on November 9 until 3pm, with formalities commencing at 1pm.

More women wanted

CHRIS THOMSON

AGRICULTURE Minister Alannah MacTiernan has vigorously defended her rejection of six recommended appointments to farm funding committees on the grounds that every suggestion from an all-male selection panel was for a man.

In the Legislative Council on October 31, Agricultural Region MLC Rick Mazza noted Ms MacTiernan had vetoed the recommendations after expressions of interest had been called on March 8.

He asked how many men and women had applied for the three committees that oversee State funding for the cattle, sheep and goats; and grains, seed and hay sectors of Western Australia's farming industry.

Ms MacTiernan said she was getting lots of correspondence on the matter from the Pastoralists and Graziers Association of WA.

On September 11 in the Upper House, she had told Mr Mazza that every recommendation – by an all-male appointments committee – for new members to the three funding bodies had been for a man.

Ms MacTiernan explained that of 21 current committee members, 19 were men.

On October 31, she urged the Legislative Council to consider "that in this day and age" such male dominance was "not feasible".

"It is simply not acceptable and, quite frankly, I think it is an insult to the women in the agricultural sector in this state to suggest that there are simply not sufficient women of merit in order to get a better ratio than 20 to one," she argued.

She said a second round of applications had drawn 15 from men, 13 of whom had previously thrown their Akubras into the ring.

Five applications were received from men who in the first round had been recommended for appointment. The sixth man recommended for appointment at the time has now been reappointed to the grains, seeds and hay committee until December 31 to ensure a quorum.

Ms MacTiernan said nine women had now lodged applications, with two deemed unsuitable.

She said she'd received advice on second-round applicants from an appointments committee, and results would be available once approved by Cabinet.

On September 11, she told Mr Mazza the appointments committee had needed modernising because it comprised only men.

"We have restructured and there are now two women on the appointments committee," she added at the time.

"One is from the Rural [Regional, Remote] Women's Network [of Western Australia].

"It is really important that we make sure that we take advantage of the entire gene pool that is available to us when making these appointments."

Hemp funding to boost growth

WESTERN Australia's hemp industry could receive an injection of cash in the coming months following the opening for applications for cash grants of up to $100,000 from the Department of Primary Industries and Regional Development.

The Industrial Hemp Grants Scheme would provide grants for research into new varieties for WA conditions and opportunities for processing industrial hemp.

Minister for Agriculture and Food Alannah MacTiernan said opportunities were opening for hemp to be used as a high-protein grain for food and beverage production as well as fibre for textiles and building products.

"The feedback we are getting from growers, processors, manufacturers and businesses is that they need support to establish processing facilities, develop markets and to identify varieties suitable for WA conditions," she said.

"This grants scheme will support the industry's activation and development and follows our government's move to increase permissible THC content in industrial hemp.

"Any expansion of the industry will not only deliver economic benefits but will provide more jobs in regional WA."

The grant scheme follows changes in state legislation to allow hemp to be grown with a higher tetrahydrocannabinol content that provided farmers with more flexibility.

Ms MacTiernan said the funding would target projects that are capable of driving growth and competitiveness at enterprise, develop better connected systems to share product information, undertake research, develop better processing opportunities, develop industrial hemp markets and purchase of capital equipment, major infrastructure and specialist equipment.

Funded projects must be completed by March 31, 2020 and successful grant holders will need to make a matching cash contribution to the project.

Applications close on November 20 at 5pm, more information is available at www.agric.wa.gov.au.

Whale tour support

NEARLY 400 Albany primary students will have the opportunity to visit Albany's Historic Whaling Station next week – for free – in celebration of the station's 40th anniversary, thanks to support from three Albany businesses.

Love's Bus Service, Albany Retrovision and North Road IGA have each put forward time and funding to allow students to visit the whaling station at no cost to their families.

Whaling station general manager Elise van Gorp said students would visit next Thursday and engage with a variety of activities.

"It is wonderful to have three locally established businesses offer support to this day so that we can provide an educational opportunity to students without a cost to families," she said.

■ Tim Harris, Russell Hare and Elise van Gorp.

Albany Retrovision's Russell Hare said he was keen to get his business on-board with helping students take part in the whaling station's 40th anniversary.

"We are a local business and we believe in supporting the local community," he said.

On the day, students will explore the Cheynes IV whale chasing ship, meet and interview retired whalers, learn sea-faring techniques, investigate different types of whales, basic engineering challenges and role-play activities.

Tim Harris from Loves Bus Service said he knows the advantage of educational programs such as this one and was glad to help students be part of it.

Love's Bus Service is this year celebrating 49 years in business.

"I like to get involved in these types of events and support the children, as I have seen over the years the benefit and enjoyment students get from these experiences," he said.

The educational day forms part of Albany's Historic Whaling Station's month of commemoration, which includes the DRIFT concert, a historical photographic exhibition, the launch of CBWC employees name boards and the November ACCI Business After Hours function.

For more information on the whaling station's 40th anniversary, visit discoverybay.com.au or call 9844 4021.

■ Neami National Western Australia State Manager Glen James, Deputy Premier Roger Cook, Albany MLA Peter Watson, WA Country Health Service Regional Director David Naughton and Parliamentary Secretary Alanna Clohesy cutting the ribbon.

Service steps up

REGIONAL Western Australia's first step up/step down community mental health service was officially opened last week, providing six beds for short-term submission patients with mental illness.

A collection of local and state dignitaries, local mental health advocates and the new staff for the Neami step up/step down facility in the old Albany Hospice building huddled under the verandah for the official ribbon cutting ceremony.

Deputy Premier and State mental health minister Roger Cook said the service was incredibly important for mental health treatment in the region.

"There is a need to improve and increase the existing beds for mental health facilities in the region which this new facility can provide," he said.

"These things are bloody hard to do and are the stickiest projects I deal with.

— Grace Jones

"But with a lot of misunderstanding in the mental health process, facilities like the step up/step down process are important for people to get the assistance they need."

Mr Cook said a step up/step down service provides short-term support for people with a mental illness to help prevent hospital admission as well as assist people to transition back into the community after a hospital stay.

"We know people recover from mental health issues when they can receive care, support and treatment within their own community, close to where they live and their family and friends," he said.

"Community mental health step up/step down services provide a vital service. They help people avoid the need for hospitalisation, or help people transition from hospital back into the community."

■ Ms Janicke gets in some practice ahead of the blitz.

Blitz on King River bugs

KING RIVER'S health will be benchmarked against that of other Australian waterways as part of a 'National Waterbug Blitz'.

Freshwater ecologist John Gooderham said the blitz aimed to assess the status of waterways by checking which aquatic macroinvertebrates inhabit rivers, creeks and lakes.

"Waterbugs are good biological indicators of the state of freshwater systems," he said.

"Some species, such as stoneflies and mayflies, are highly sensitive to pollution, while others, including beetles and bloodworms, are more tolerant."

"The greater number and variety of the more sensitive bugs, the healthier the water is."

Project leader Birgitta Hansen said citizen scientists could make a significant contribution.

"The Blitz is great for your health, and it's safe for the creatures involved as well," she said. "The method is non-harmful to the waterbugs; they all get to go back into the water safe and sound."

A workshop, accessed via Kelly View in Willingy, will be held at King River on Saturday from 11am. More info can be gleaned from Geraldine Janicke on 0428 414 468.

Misleading ads prompt penalties

CHRIS THOMSON

HEARING aid retailers Oticon Australia and Sonic Innovations have been ordered to pay penalties totalling $2.5 million for misleading pensioners about devices sold by two clinic chains that operate across the Great South.

Oticon and Sonic Innovations admitted its newspaper advertisements contained three false and misleading representations about hearing aids available to pensioners under the Federal hearing services program.

ACCC Commissioner Sarah Court said many pensioners targeted by the ads were vulnerable due to their age and hearing loss.

"The misleading representations by Sonic and Oticon created a false sense of urgency for these consumers to book a hearing test and led them into a sales process based on incorrect information," she said.

"This conduct is unacceptable particularly because it targeted vulnerable pensioners."

The Federal Court imposed penalties of $2.5 million, and ordered that the companies offer refunds to customers and publish a corrective notice in a nationally circulated newspaper.

"The decision from the Federal Court sends a strong message to the hearing aid industry about the importance of ensuring all representations to consumers are accurate and not misleading," Ms Court said.

The companies misled consumers by claiming that to obtain a free hearing aid, pensioners had to book a test at an AudioClinic or HearingLife clinic before the deadline in the ad. In fact, there was no time limit.

There are AudioClinics at Lockyer Avenue in Albany, and on Mount Shadforth Road in Denmark. HearingLife has a clinic at Katanning Hospital.

Neither chain of clinics was on trial and there was no ruling against them.

Oticon and Sonic Innovations also misled consumers by claiming the free hearing aids included wireless technology that could be connected to televisions and mobile phones.

The wireless technology was in fact an accessory sold separately at extra cost.

A claim that users of the advertised hearing aid would no longer miss conversations – when in fact that depends on a person's circumstances and the nature of their hearing impairment – also landed Opticon and Sonic Innovations in hot water.

About 2,000 school students from 26 schools across the Great Southern region will come together in Albany this Thursday to remember our country's war heroes in a combined schools commemoration for the Centenary of Armistice.

Following a similar schools event in 2015 to commemorate 100 years since the Anzacs landed at Gallipoli, the event will begin with a parade on York Street at 10am before the students assemble in Anzac Peace Park for the 10:30am service.

For more information about the project and the schools that took part, visit www.albany.wa.gov.au

A group of Albany ladies have been busy making 1,000 poppies that will pay homage to the Anzacs in the Town Square during the commemorations of the centenary of Armistice starting next week.

The event hub will include medal and poppy-making workshops for children, and a stall will be selling Remembrance Day poppies for a gold coin donation.

A Town Crier will welcome the troops into the street and will read the Declaration of Armistice published in the Albany Advertiser on November 13, 1918.

The event will include long table-style street dining with local cafes and restaurants, live performances, a display of period vintage and military vehicles, stalls, children's activities, a photo booth and more.

There will be a special celebratory moment during the event to mark the end of the war. The Armistice Day Community Celebration will run from 12 noon to 6pm on November 11.

Rare chance for

AT TIME of going to print, a horde of prospective buyers had already dragged the beach sand through this blue-ribbon property in a quest to get their hands on a rare lifestyle opportunity, according to exclusive selling agent Jeremy Stewart.

Mr Stewart, principal of Merrifield Real Estate, said he could count on one hand the number of times a brand new house had come onto the market in Albany's prime beachside dress circle at Middleton Beach in his 15-and-a-half years in the game.

Such was the rarity that potential buyers were not holding back with their interest in the property, defying the market's usual snail pace when it comes to buyer enthusiasm.

"I've had plenty of listings in Middleton Beach before, but to a snare a location like this with water and mountain views and combine it with a newly built home that features stunning design – well, let's just say, the opportunity doesn't come along every day," Mr Stewart said.

"I think the strong early interest is a good indication of that."

Although brand-spanking new, the home that sits atop the 482sqm block at 14 Wylie Crescent (perhaps Albany's premier street), has been a few years in the making.

Albany born and bred architect Grace Schlager is one of the owners and invested heavily with the time she took to get the design right.

The dedication to designing a home that makes the most of the northern aspect and world-class views was never tempered by the challenges of building on

Ms Schlager's connection with Albany and the surrounding beachy feel provided a depth of inspiration.

"I wanted that Middleton beachhouse feel, but with a modern twist," she said from her office at H+H Architects.

"The choice of materials reflects that – the weather boards, the recycled bricks – it all fits in with the surrounding houses, but it's bold, without being too bold.

It seems the plans were only ever drawn up with one builder in mind, and it was no surprise to find that Ms Schlager entrusted the project to her father, Russell Schlager, to do the design justice.

While building projects of this complexity can test any working relationship, Ms Schlager said she would not hesitate to team up with her dad again.

"It was great working with him," she said.

"He knew where I was coming from with the design, and if there were any problems, we'd just talk through them together.

"Russell wanted the design to work for me, and

beachside living

I wanted the build to work for him, so it was never a big stress."

Mr Stewart said the early feedback from potential buyers mainly heaped praise on the Schlagers.

"It's clearly been built with the love and care as if it was their own home," he said.

"That's the beauty of this property; there is so much to enjoy before you get down to beach and get the sand between your toes."

Mr Stewart said the door was still ajar for inspections of the property with a home open this Saturday at 1pm. He can be contacted through Merrifield Real Estate on 9841 4022 and more information can be found on their website at www.merrifield.com.au

DO YOU KNOW THE WINNER OF THE 2018 GSDC MEDAL?

The GSDC Medal is the Great Southern's most prestigious award recognising best practice and innovative contributions to managing natural resources.

Past winners include farmers, community leaders and scientists.

NOW IS THE TIME TO NOMINATE

The winner of the 2018 GSDC Medal will receive a sterling silver medal and $5,000 grant to further their work from the Great Southern Development Commission.

NOMINATE SOMEONE WHO INSPIRES YOU

Celebrating best practice in the management of natural resources

A medal for innovators

NATURAL resource management is a strong focus for the Great Southern Development Commission and that's why they offer the GSDC Medal for efforts in this cause.

Nominations are now open to business people and volunteers who go above and beyond to assist with the managing of the environment through the conservation and sustainable use of natural terrestrial and marine resources. The goal is to benefit the environment for current and future generations.

You can nominate yourself or you can nominate someone either in business or who volunteers.

Previous reasons people have been nominated are because they do work that is believed to be worthy of recognition; the nominee would personally benefit; and that the grant money provided to winners and runners-up would be well-used as an asset to the Great Southern.

This GSDC Medal is awarded every second year, with opportunities made available to the public for them to learn more about the Medalist work.

The application process includes creating written statements addressing five criteria with a 1500 word limit. There must be evidence to support claims and there will also be an assessment panel which conducts an interview which is generally done in the field or at the place of business.

The GSDC Medal is about "celebrating the best practice in management of natural resources". Dwarf cattle has advantages

THE University of Western Australia and an international team of researchers have published some interesting findings in regards to dwarf cattle breeds.

A study has shown that dwarf breeds of cattle are better at adapting to hotter climates using different heat tolerance mechanisms than standard breeds. Coming to UWA in 2013 to train under Professor Shane Maloney, Dr Muhammed Elayadeth-Meethal from Kerala Veterinary and Animal Sciences University India, learned about thermal physiology measurements.

Dr Elayadeth-Meethal led this study and said the standard cattle breeds acclimatise to the environment through physiological, biochemical and molecular changes, while the dwarf breeds have adapted through changes in their genes.

"Standard size cattle breeds can acclimatise in the short term to higher temperatures but reach their tolerance limit under prevailing tropical conditions, while the dwarf breeds are genetically adapted to the warmer climate," Dr Elayadeth-Meethal said.

"There is an increasing trend of importing international breeds rather than relying on domestic breeds which may be smaller in size but are better suited to a tropical climate. For example, Professor Maloney said.

"Tolerant breeds are preferred as it requires minimum diet and management modifications and ■ Vechur is the smallest breed of cattle.

thus causes less welfare and environmental issues compared to high yielding commercial breeds."

The research will open up new ways in assessing heat

Soil health focus of event

WITH 160 people listening and learning about how to improve the nutrients in their soils. Afternoon tea with Sabrina Hahn at Stonemeal Farm in Narrikup was a great success on Saturday.

Sabrina is a gardening guru, a regular on ABC radio and in the West Australian, and she brought her knowledge and personality to those looking to improve the quality of their soils for food production and to better the environment.

Knowledge shared included how minerals improve soil for better, healthy sheep, and, as chemicals are not used, side-effects from chemical use are removed.

Farmers spoke of rarely using fungicides or insecticides for 25 years and seeing improved results with better biology, only using chemicals as a last resort.

Immune systems in plants, where they can't resist diseases, were discussed with a focus on looking at the soil biology to increase health.

Grow Safe was holding the event and for three years has had a good turnout and great feedback and looks forward to holding more events like this in the future.

FREE GORSE CONTROL

Gorse is considered one of Australia's worst weeds. This prickly pest is highly invasive with a great potential to spread, causing both agricultural and environmental impacts.

As part of an ongoing commitment to gorse eradication in the Albany region, South Coast NRM have limited funding available to treat gorse on private and public land.

Landholders and managers are encouraged to apply to have gorse infestations treated on their properties. Priority will be given to sites threatening native bushland and, particularly, waterways including Yakamia Creek.

Pool funds floated

CHRIS THOMSON

MOUNT BARKER'S 50-metre, 50-year-old swimming pool is being primed for a $2.2 million overhaul.

On Tuesday night, Plantagenet councillors approved a recommendation by Shire community services manager Fiona Pengel to allocate $50,000 to fund a feasibility study to include detailed plans and accurate costings for the pool's refurbishment.

Ms Pengel advised that in April last year the pool was emptied, inspected, and painted for the first time in 13 years.

The pool was opened in 1971, and an engineer's report has determined its bowl is essentially sound.

But the engineer noted

there were cracks in the deck edge coping that was evidence of settlement of the bowl.

The engineer advised that buildings at the swimming complex were showing signs of structural damage and toilets and showers are now inadequate.

The plant room equipment was assessed as aged with mostly limited life expectancy.

"The toddler pool is small and uninteresting and would benefit from an upgrade to improve the amenity for younger children," Ms Pengel advised ahead of the meeting.

Plans for the pool upgrade include a new therapy and toddler pool, new plant room, new change rooms, extra car parking, and retention of the existing Olympic-length pool.

■ Pool recreation officer Zac Hambley and manager Mark Bird at the pool ahead of last swimming season.

A costing provided by Denmark-based Maxwell Designs puts the refurbishment, including car parks, at between $2,214,200 and $2,249,800.

Movie funding approved

MOUNT BARKER-based feature film Rams has received a nice local windfall, with Shire of Plantagenet council recently voting unanimously to assist WBMC filmmakers with a $60,000 cheque.

Last month, The Weekender revealed the latest big production film to hit the Great Southern would feature the likes of Jurassic Park star Sam Neill and Last Cab to Darwin's Michael Catton ('Feature film for Barker', 13 September 2018).

At the October 9 council meeting,

WBMC CEO Aidan O'Bryan addressed the full council to express his appreciation for the local support during filming.

"The welcome from the region has been phenomenal," he said.

"The feedback we have received has been positive."

Later in the meeting, the Council adjourned behind closed doors for 15 minutes where they voted to formally support Rams being filmed in the Shire with a cheque for $60,000 to assist with production.

Rams is an English-language adaptation of the Icelandic film HRUTAR which tells the story of two estranged brothers on adjoining sheep farms who haven't spoken to each other in 40 years.

The brothers are forced to work together when a rare disease threatens their sheep flock, their small town and their family's legacy.

Filming in Mt Barker is expected to finish around Christmas.

Free swim for ankle biters

KIDS under the age of 10 and their oldies will get a free swim at the Mount Barker pool on December 21 to participate in Watch Around Water Day.

The day occurs annually to promote the importance of constant supervision of children around water.

Ahead of a council meeting on Tuesday night, Shire community services manager Fiona Pengel advised elected officials that waiving entry fees for under 10s and their parents would cost ratepayers between $200 and $300.

"Over 95 per cent of public swimming pools in Western Australia run the WAW program and it is regarded as one of the key factors of zero incidents of drowning death in group one aquatic facilities since 2003," she explained in a report.

Ms Pengel's recommendations for free entry on December 21, and a 2018/19 individual season pass worth $100 as a door prize, were approved by the Shire council on Tuesday night.

MOVEMBER

advertising feature

A global focus on men

ANOTHER year, another month for men to grow and groom their upper lip hair and get in the November spirit.

While it started as a small group trying to put the focus on men's health issues, Movenember is now boasting to be the largest men's health movement in the world.

Some participants have the genes to grow some impressive moustaches, taking on inspiration from Salvador Dali and Merv Hughes. For others, it is just about participating and being part of a team hoping to raise funds to raise awareness of men's health issues both physical and mental.

For your growing efforts to be rewarded, head to au.movenember.com and sign up. You can also sign up a team and if you don't want to grow a moustache, you can choose to move. One of the other ways you can contribute to the cause is to commit to running, jogging or walking 60 kilometres over the month. Sixty is the chosen number, representing the number of men Movenember believes takes their lives every hour.

If you are feeling apprehensive about raising money, you will be surprised by the generosity of people you know and strangers, too. Post on Facebook or Instagram, ask around the workplace, gym or in your sports team. You have nothing to lose but a lot of people have support and awareness to gain.

On the website you will also find information on where the money goes and the strategies the Movenember team use to promote men's health around the world.

There are also resources on ways for men to check their own bodies for signs of cancer, much like how there is promotion for women to check themselves for breast cancer.

If you aren't keen on growing or moving or raising funds, offer a donation to those who are putting the effort this November. Find a local or go online and help add to the success that is Movenember.

Three ways you can get involved this November

	WHAT	HOW	WHEN
01 GROW	Grow a Mo, save a Bro.	The moustache is our ribbon for men's health.	For the 30 days in the month formerly known as 'November'.
02 WHAT	Get active for men's health.	Raise funds for men's health while you do something good for your own health.	Anytime, anywhere, during the month of November.
03 HOST	Throw or go to a November event.	Any excuse for a good time. Events are a great way to have fun and raise funds for men's health.	Anytime, anywhere, during the month of November.

LITTLE Grove offers such a relaxed and enjoyable community environment for those looking to settle back and enjoy life.

Both of these particular properties – set in a cul-de-sac close to the harbour foreshore, local shop, golf course and yacht club – present an exciting prospect for relaxed living.

Each on its own separate title and completed in 2017, these impeccably maintained and presented properties present a great alternative to building.

All the decisions have been made in these beautiful and intelligently designed four-bedroom, three-bathroom, wheelchair-friendly homes.

Standout features in these homes include the spacious living with coffered ceiling and dining flowing onto the alfresco areas, and inspired gallery kitchen with twin ovens, five-burner cooktop, dishwasher, excellent preparation space and access to two walk-in general storage cupboards/pantries.

Each home has plenty of room for visiting family and friends, with two master suites each with an ensuite, and double-sized bedrooms.

All wet areas boast quality fittings and floor-to-ceiling tiles, and doorways and showers to the larger master suite of each home are specifically designed to allow wheelchair access. Laundries are spacious and bright and there is storage aplenty throughout.

The 468sqm easy-care, well-paved blocks are secure and private with lock-and-leave appeal. Featuring level access and drive-through double garage access, these properties present as-new inside and out.

Big on comfort and life-style options and low on care and maintenance, these properties are your opportunity to settle in and enjoy the ever-popular Little Grove.

Arrange your viewing today by contacting Donna Dabala on 0404 057 634 or attend the home open at 17 Cornuta Way on Saturday, November 10 at 11.30am.

A stitch in time

ASHLEIGH FIELDING

KATANNING's newest art exhibition looks deep into the past at how the humble domestic sewing machine changed the lives of women at home.

Curator of Machines and Makers Jude van der Merwe said it was when she discovered her neighbour's collection of 260 old domestic sewing machines that she learned about the impact the device had on women during the world wars.

She said her neighbour had been an apprentice sewing machine repairer during World War II and had maintained his passion for them ever since.

"That was the starting point, really," Ms van der Merwe said of the exhibition.

"I didn't realise that the domestic sewing machine had changed the lives of women so much...they could make a living, and make clothes for their family."

Machines and Makers features the work of 12 artists, responding in their respective mediums to the notion that sewing machines changed the lives of women.

It is part of Art on the Move, a Perth-based organisation dedicated to touring contemporary visual art exhibitions across the country.

Ongerup-bred Susie Vickery is featured in Machines and Makers and has created embroidered smaller-scale sewing machines for the exhibition, which Ms van der Merwe described as "absolutely beautiful".

sewing machine, and the mice are hanging up washing and repairing machines.

Ms van der Merwe was impressed with the range of artwork created.

"It's an extraordinary medium. It's very flexible," she said of textiles.

"I think we are all close to textiles, because we wear it, we touch it and we feel it, and so many people can express their love for it in many different ways."

Machines and Makers is at the Katanning Public Art Gallery until November 24.

YouTuber steps in for Kanye

■ Alex Williamson performs at the AEC on November 17.

ASHLEIGH FIELDING

AUSSIE YouTube star and self-proclaimed loose unit Alex Williamson is heading to Albany next week for a show "so wrong, it's wrong".

Williamson first hit YouTube in 2003 with the likes of his seven-part Sweet AFL Dream Team series, The Summer of Ben Cousins, and later his most renowned series, Loosest Aussie Binge Ever.

Along the way, he's roped in MC Eso from Aussie hip hop trio Bliss n Eso, and fellow Aussie comedians Troy Kinne, Superwog and Frenchy, to perform skits about standard Aussie banter, sex, drugs, booty calls, Pokemon and his beloved C-word.

From there, Williamson's career spun into an international one, leaving behind his high school teaching career to entertain on stages across Australia and the UK, and wrangling interviews with actors Sacha Baron Cohen, Jennifer Aniston, Harrison Ford, Robin Williams, Ryan Reynolds and Tom Felton.

Williamson spoke to The Weekender while enjoying the sunshine back home in regional South Australia between his Renmark and Ipswich performances of his So Wrong, It's Wrong tour.

"I was a quiet little kid," he said, reflecting on his childhood.

"People always ask was I funny in school and I say, 'nah, I was a f---in' quiet loser'."

"But I was always talking to people, I never shunned anyone out."

Williamson said he chose to embrace the Aussie bogan stereotype in his videos because there was "no point" denying it.

"It was hiding deep within," Williamson laughed.

"Now I've realised I'm a bogan, I'm living life to the fullest."

He said despite being Aussie through and through, he's had people question his lineage due to his "Aussie-isms" and cocker accent.

"I was overseas and someone came up to me and thought I was doing well, because they thought English was my second language," Williamson chuckled.

"But when I'm overseas I want to Aussie it up a bit...I flick the Aussie knob to 110 per cent."

"And in the UK, they love it!"

"They've just got this fascination...but I did feel like I should've been in the bogan enclosure at London Zoo."

His speech has confused a few Americans on his travels too.

"I was at a house party in the US talking to this girl," Williamson began.

"And at the end of the conversation, I said, 'ah, fair-o!' and she looked at me and said, 'whaaat? Like an Egyptian Pharaoh?'"

Williamson is keen to get around regional Australia where everyone "speaks his language".

"You know us country folk, we can read Harry Potter out loud in five minutes," he said.

"And I can include all my Aussie-isms that I had to abandon in the UK."

"I had a joke for a UK show and the punch line was Shannon Noll, and when I realised he's not the next Taylor Swift, I had to change it to some sh--- celebrity they would know."

When informed by The Weekender that Albany is inhabited by a predominantly older demographic, Williamson said they might be "a bit stunned and shocked" by his show, but still encouraged all people to come along.

"I had a couple of 90-year-olds come to a show once because they thought they were seeing John Williamson," he said.

"They left after 10 minutes and complained to the doorman that the only word they understood was the F-word."

"But, they said, 'well at least he's getting young people to the theatre.'"

Williamson said he loves regional shows and bringing something to rural towns, as he couldn't imagine people like Kanye West would make the hike.

So, he's "stepping in" for Kanye and performing at the Albany Entertainment Centre on November 17.

Local support builds for Lior

■ Mary Jayne Negus from Mary Jayne and the Smoke Detectors will fly solo on November 25 to perform with Israeli-Australian singer-songwriter Lior.

ASHLEIGH FIELDING

DENMARK musician Mary Jayne Negus will support Israeli-Australian singer-songwriter Lior at the end of the month as part of Lior's national tour.

The November 25 show at Denmark Civic Centre is one of only three shows Lior will play in WA and the only one in the Great Southern.

Negus, front liner of Denmark act Mary Jayne and the Smoke Detectors, was selected by Denmark Arts to perform with Lior after her recent success at Denmark's Festival of Voice.

Event manager Sophie Lines said Negus's "distinctive and ethereal voice" would set the scene for the evening performance.

"Mary's flute and gentle guitar complement her poetic lyrics that draw on her Celtic musical roots," she said.

"Her songs have been described as haunting and invoking the stillness of the night."

Negus said she is both eager and nervous to perform with Lior, who she said had been "really well received" by Denmarkians in the past.

"People are pretty excited around town," she said.

"I feel really honoured to support such a talented man."

Negus will play the flute and guitar for the support act, which she says will feature her original solo work.

Her music focuses on

■ Lior.

"relevant" topics such as following dreams and protecting the environment.

"Both of us have really soulful and moving music," Negus said of herself and Lior.

"I try to relate topics to the community, like positive affirmations and how important living in this time is... songs filled with truth and relevance."

Tickets to the November 25 concert can be purchased online via denmarkarts.com.au.

Mentorship up for grabs

A YEAR-LONG, fully-funded mentorship with national theatre company Bell Shakespeare is up for grabs for Great Southern teachers who apply before November 26.

The 2019 Regional Teacher Mentorship will provide 30 teachers from across Australia with the opportunity to travel to Bell Shakespeare's Sydney headquarters for four days of specialist training in teaching Shakespeare.

They will also collaborate and network with teachers from other regions, and see Bell Shakespeare's production of The Miserat Sydney Opera House.

The teachers will receive ongoing support from Bell Shakespeare artists and staff throughout the year, as well as access to in-school and in-theatre programs to support their continued learning.

Bell Shakespeare's artistic director Peter Evans said the mentorship was a big opportunity for teachers from regional and remote areas.

"This program equips the participants with tools and strategies to teach in ways that can help break down the barriers to students' understanding and appreciation of the ideas, language, imagery and relevance of Shakespeare's work," he said.

"The teachers come away from the experience with the confidence to implement new approaches in the classroom and lesson plans that include more active and engaging methods of teaching."

Executive director of Bell Shakespeare Gill Perkins said the program was an important part of the company's longstanding commitment to reaching regional and remote Australia.

"The Regional Teacher Mentorship has a significant impact, especially in smaller communities that may not otherwise have such opportunities," she said.

"Our commitment to reaching regional and remotely located Australians is one we take great pride in."

"I look forward to welcoming 30 new teachers to the mentorship in 2019."

Applications close on November 26 and the winners will be announced in December.

The mentorship recipients will join Bell Shakespeare in two tranches in March 2019. Visit bellshakespeare.com.au to apply.

Kings of the road

SEBASTIAN COMMONS

THE Swing Kings will be going their separate ways this November after three sell-out performances and a debut EP, but not before hitting the stage for one more weekend to bid goodbye to the Great Southern.

The Weekender had the chance to stop by during one of their rehearsals for a chat about their rapid rise to local fame and their plans for the future.

The band, which consists of Evan Ayres on guitar and lead vocals, Oliver Tellow on bass, Mollie Hare and Bonnie Staude on backing vocals, Bryce Taylor on trumpet, Anna Leach on saxophone, Hunter Ewen on trombone and Jeremy Staude on drums, said the experience had been very rewarding.

"It's been terrific," Ayres said.

"It's been such a great opportunity."

The group has a wide range of talents and interests, which is evident when talking about their plans for after the final show.

Front man Ayres plans to pursue music, hoping to score a place at the WA Academy of Performing Arts (WAAPA) next year.

The same goes for backing singers Mollie Hare and Bonnie Staude, who are both hoping to study musical theatre at the Academy.

Oliver Tellow is going to university to study engineering, Anna Leach to study social work, Hunter Ewen plans to go into pathology, Bryce Taylor is going to university in Canberra, and Jeremy Staude said he'd like to go on holiday to Japan.

When asked how being in the band had impacted their lives, the band agreed that it had made a whole lot busier, but more exciting too.

"It's a bit tricky to balance our workload with all of us still in school — well, except for Mollie — but I think Evan's got his priorities straight: music first," Bonnie Staude said, much to the amusement of Ayres.

"But yeah, it's definitely worth it."

The band were quick to respond when asked about the highlights of their brief Swing Kings career.

"It's probably the adrenaline of performing," Bonnie Staude said.

"It's cool to be in a band that's so high calibre; it's really good music that you don't always find."

Ayres said that having five sell-out shows including the two upcoming farewell performances — had been one of his major highlights.

"One sold out in two hours, which was pretty amazing," he said.

Tellow said his highlight came after their first performance.

Taylor explained how supportive their fans had been.

"It's the response we get after the shows: we have people coming through with CDs asking for autographs or just saying how much they enjoyed the show," he said.

"I like playing fast songs," Jeremy Staude said plainly, causing an eruption of laughter from his fellow band members, who joked that they'd often catch him nodding off during the slower numbers.

Though the band is splitting up for now, they are all hopeful there will be a Swing Kings reunion in the future.

"It would be sad if there wasn't," Bonnie Staude said.

Married or De-facto – does it matter anyway?

file. No such provision exists for de facto: they must file proceedings within two years.

When married couples use IVF, both spouses are automatically legal parents, but for de facto couples, their child's parentage depends on whether the de facto relationship is proven to exist.

SOME legal commentators argue that it makes very little difference whether couples are married or living in de facto relationships.

One law firm recently wrote to clients: "Those in de facto relationships in Australia have generally the same rights and entitlements and are subject to generally the same obligations and responsibilities as married people, with respect to alteration and division of property interests, maintenance and superannuation."

This view should be challenged, as marriage gives people access to a complete package of rights simply by showing their marriage certificate or ticking a box.

De-facto relationships need to be proved as a question of fact, and in any event are deemed to have different rights and obligations, depending on the legal context. For instance:

For Centrelink purposes, you are a de facto couple from the moment you start living together, but for migration law it is after 12 months of cohabiting.

Generally under family law, a minimum of two years is required before a de facto relationship is established. Married couples going through divorce must file for property and/or spousal maintenance proceedings in the Family Court within one year of finalising a divorce, but have the option to agree to an extension of time in which to

In estate planning, a new marriage nullifies an existing will. That is not the case when you enter a new de facto relationship. If you die before making a new will, a court might need to decide how your assets are allocated. A person in a de facto relationship might also need to prove their relationship if their partner is very ill, in order to make decisions about their care and treatment. They might need to prove their relationship to be listed as a spouse on a death certificate or to be involved in funeral planning.

Being listed on a death certificate as a spouse is critically important when it comes to claiming superannuation payouts.

There are many examples of a couple's de facto status being challenged by one partner's family in inheritance proceedings. Marriage, on the other hand, is undeniable.

Obviously, the issue has taken on greater significance with same sex marriage soon to be legalised. Whether you are in support of same-sex marriage or not, it is incorrect to say there is not much difference between a marriage and a de-facto relationship. Legally, there are many differences, and the list above shows only some examples.

Fried green tomatoes, Geoff's way

From BG's Kitchen

I love to throw together this Southern US inspired dish whenever our vegetarian friends come over... it is really moreish, like a vegetarian fried chicken! Green tomatoes are firmer and less sweet than their ripe siblings, so they can hold their integrity when placed under an extreme heat. You can ask your greengrocer to source them, pick out the very under-ripe tomatoes from what's available, or simply pick them from your own garden before they ripen. Historically, fried green tomatoes would be coated in cornmeal and fried in bacon lard (not so great for my veggie friends!), so this is my twist on the tradition.

Ingredients

Fried Green Tomatoes
2 green tomatoes, sliced thickly
100ml buttermilk

Cajun spice, to taste
Plain flour, enough to dredge the tomatoes in Oil or fat with a high smoking point – enough to half fill a medium pot or your domestic deep fryer.

Garlic and Herb Yoghurt
1/2 clove garlic, minced
Handful chopped fresh, soft herbs – I use parsley and coriander
2 tablespoons natural/ Greek yoghurt

Avocado and Rice Salad
1/2 cup cooked rice
1/2 avocado, diced

1/3 cup sweet corn, cooked
1 bunch chives, finely sliced

Grilled Chilli and Orange Dressing

2 grilled red and green chillies, deseeded and skinned
Zest of one orange
Juice of half a lemon
250ml neutral flavoured oil
50ml extra virgin olive oil

Method

Start by preparing your sides, even ahead of time. For the dressing, add all ingredients except for the oil to a blender and blitz until fine. Gradually drizzle in oil, and taste.

You can adjust the citrus and oil to your palate.

The salad and the herb yoghurt are easy; simply mix the ingredients listed above (respectively), remembering to taste and season with salt and pepper. Toss through the salad with the orange dressing just before plating.

Now for the main event! Mix together the buttermilk and Cajun spice.

I haven't specified an amount for the spice because this is really up to you.

What I would suggest is to taste as you add the spice and push it right up to the level of heat that you can stand – the flour will significantly dilute the strength of the Cajun in the final dish, leaving you with a nice warmth. Heat the oil in your medium pot or fryer to 180 degrees or when a small piece of bread turns golden brown in around a minute.

Set up your buttermilk mixture and plain flour in side-by-side bowls. Dip the tomatoes first in the buttermilk, coating well, and then dredging in the flour.

Deep fry in batches until golden brown, and remove to a rack to drain excess fat. Before serving, season the fried tomatoes in Cajun spice, or salt if you are wary of the heat.

Serving tip: Dress your plate with the herb yoghurt, laying the salad and fried tomatoes on top. Feeling fancy? Garnish with fresh herbs and sliced chilli.

Bug bites collector

Over the next little while, we'll take a look at some of our favourite classic cars from the past few years. Here's one from June 22, 2017.

BY HIS own admission, Chris Valley is a Volkswagen tragic, but he is totally okay with it.

His rare 1967 VW Type 3 Fastback in Zenith Blue has been turning heads around town for a few years, but usually out of curiosity, more than pure envy.

Chris has a small collection of VWs, including a much-loved 1966 Beetle and no less than three Kombis.

"I've got it bad, but I got it bad a long time ago," he said. "I wouldn't be able to afford to buy them all now."

"I'm a Volkswagen tragic, but I'm not bothered."

Chris said the typical response of onlookers of smiles and waves when he drove his Beetle or Kombi was not shared with the Fastback.

"It's usually blokes that come up looking slightly puzzled wondering what the car is," he said.

Chris said the love of VWs began as a child when he was growing up in Leeds, in the UK.

The only new car his family ever drove was a Beetle.

"We'd drive up to Scotland for holidays every year," he said.

"We floated it going across a little fjord once. There were three boys in the back and my Mum hit it at speed and it made it across just by the wheels spinning.

"It was also the first car that I sat on in my Dad's knee and steered, and that's what got me into the VWs."

Chris said, when he emigrated to Australia 20 years ago, he heard all the horror stories of VWs sitting on the side of the road on a scorching summer's day blowing steam.

"People used to drive around with the rear bonnet open, thinking it would cool the engine down. But the bonnet needs to be shut for the engine to cool properly," he said.

Fortunately there are no horror stories with the Fastback.

It is built on the same principles as the Beetle (aka Type 1) with its rear-mounted, air-cooled four-cylinder engine, but has the added bonus of more storage space thanks to the lower engine position.

It could be disconcerting for new owners to open the rear bonnet and find no sign of an engine.

A later variant of the Type 1 was also the first mass-produced car with electronic fuel injection.

Chris says the 1600cc Fastback is a joy to drive and less boaty than a Beetle.

It is a joy he also shares with others in his role working with people with disabilities.

"They love it when they hop in and they get to go for a cruise," he said.

He is also proud of the fact that he can pick and choose which of his VWs to drive, depending on his mood.

"These are all daily drivers. I don't own a new car," he said.

Love-hate relationship

TRAILBLAZERS

I WAS lucky enough to catch a monster samson fish this week. Over the years I have seen some big sambos weighed in, but this one was by far the biggest I have ever seen.

My crew and I estimate the fish to have weighed over 50kg, and with a bit of work it swam away to get even bigger.

This fish got me thinking about the love-hate relationship I have had with sambos over many years.

I all started back in the 70s one Easter weekend on the rocks at Little Beach at Two Peoples Bay. I was on holiday in Albany and as usual was doing some fishing.

Salmon was my target species. I had a nice burley trail heading out from the rocks and was casting an unweighted mule out into the trail, then...bang, I was on. It soon became apparent this was no salmon.

After a good but clean fight, a 15kg samson swam into view and a fellow fisher helped me land my prize, which at that time was one of the biggest fish I had caught. I kept that fish and it tasted quite good and gave me plenty of good foods.

Fast forward to the mid-80s when I was still Perth-based and tied up with the West Coast Sports Fishing Club.

We fished a spot between Rottnest and Carnac islands known as Kingie Reef. This was in the days before GPS on recreational fishing boats and it took some skill and time to find this spot.

I can still vaguely remember that you had to line up the 3rd chimney on the South Fremantle power station with something else as one of the marks, but boy did we catch some sambos. And all of them were released to keep fighting; there was no braid or flash jiggling rods.

We mainly fished with Penn 850s with 10kg or 15kg blue platypus nylon line on 4108 Ugly Sticks.

The things we did to keep these fish alive sometimes were questionable for our own safety.

One incident involved a young Darryl Hitchens who stripped off and swam out to one fish that was struggling to get back down. Darryl brought it back to the boat so we could keep working on it.

It was probably the most questionable effort, as the previous day a male's boat had been buzzed by a rather large great white shark at the very same spot.

I could go on with memories of sambos from places like Apex Reef at Jurien Bay and the Abrohos Islands, or even the time I demonstrated the gentle approach on a rampant school of fish at Two Peoples Bay to a young Deacon Plant, only for him to try the technique and get buried in no time flat—but I have only so much space.

As you can see, I have

■ Not the author's monster fish of this week, but a fair lump of a Seriola hippos from a few years ago.

had more than the average interaction with Seriola hippos over the years and have chosen to release most of my captures.

But that is a personal choice as I have had some fish around the 10kg mark and they have been great eating.

But I would question the need to kill fish over 20kg as, on average, they are not the best table fare.

Noel Pearson Memorial

THE Albany Speedway Club will honor one of the club's original members, a man who never got behind the wheel but devoted his time to organising everything from the clubrooms to the track itself, next Saturday with the running of the Noel Pearson Memorial.

The Noel Pearson Memorial is awarded to the club member who earns the highest points across the night, and last year's joint winners Hayden Mortimer (Juniors) and Jason Batchelor (Productions) will be wanting to take it out again.

It is expected the Formula 125's will have a strong field again, with last start winner Bill

Beeck at the top of the list.

With seven BOG Stocks at their first meeting the new division is likely to have a few new drivers trying their hand at speedway and should provide plenty of action.

Looking to gain every bit of experience on their home track will be the Junior Sedans as they prepare for the Western Australian Junior Title being held in January.

Joining the local division will be the left hand drive, V8 powered AMCAs and will see drivers from across the state converge on Albany as they battle it out for points in their club championship.

Also on the program will be the Production Sedans and Street Stocks.

With many exciting events still to come this season stay tuned to the Albany Speedway Club Facebook page for all the latest news and information.

Knights run home

GRACE JONES

KNIGHTS powered home in the second half against Kinjarling Thunder in their Albany Basketball Association men's A-grade match on Tuesday night to win by 11 points.

Thunder started the match off strong as Jackson Shaw scored four points within the first two minutes.

Both teams fought hard for their chance to get their hands on the ball, with Knights' Keam Weeden and Thomas Edwards blitzing through Thunder's defense and tying the score to 23 apiece at half-time.

During the second half, Thunder tried to keep their momentum going as Sam Finigan and Shaw led the offensive charge.

With the skills of both teams evenly matched, the stalemate continued before Knights began to edge Thunder out of the contest.

By full-time, Knights cemented their lead and brought home the win, 50-38.

The contest between

Tigers and Crabs was not so close. Wade Eskett was in fine form from long range for Crabs, but couldn't eclipse Tigers' John Santa, who led the scoring with a standout 26-points.

Santa's hard work and hot hand led his side to a 61-37 win.

The margin between Albany Spartans and Barking Owls blew out even further, as Owls cemented top-spot on the ladder with a percentage-boosting 35-point victory, 76-41.

The association's newest team, The Farm Athletics, added another win under their belt, leaving Raiders U18 Boys with a 20-point deficit, 57-37.

The women's A-grade clash between Magpies and Phoenix was a high-light of the round, with Magpies taking a narrow two-point victory.

Frustrations were high in the second half, with Magpies' Jasmine Jones clashing with Phoenix's Rachel Goetze and Matilda Wylde during the 29-27 result.

Current ladder leaders Panthers had a 19-point win against Raiders U18 Girls in their contest.

Panther's Ella Scamozzi top-scored with 15 points for the game.

Raider's Narelle Humphries kept the pressure on Scamozzi, but by the final buzzer Panthers were the victors, 54-35.

STUDENTS from the Denmark College of Agriculture made the three-hour trip to their sister school in Narrogin recently to compete in the Inter-College Equestrian Challenge and placed third overall.

Harvey College of Agriculture placed first for the event with 1488 points, hosting college Narrogin placed second with 684 points and Denmark came in third with 152 points.

College Equine Teacher Elissa Forbes said a team of nine students, with the support of their parents, made the trip and returned with second and third-place ribbons in campdrafting, and a first place in hacking, with Jenna Wise the top-performing rider.

"For the majority of the team it was their first competition," she said.

"The students did their best and worked very well as a team supporting one another."

"A few surprised themselves, placing in events they had never competed at before."

"We have three students who compete in equestrian competitions outside the recent Narrogin event and we have another two students who want to compete at future shows."

Denmark's team consisted of Emily Perkins, Caitlin Wilson, Wise, Asher Trom-Wright, Deahna Keam, Ashleigh Pritchard, Kayla Emmerton and Estacia Lang.

Year 11 student Pritchard also competed at the 'Saddles Plus' State Inter-school Equestrian Championships in Brigadoon earlier this year and placed fourth in jumping, fourth in working hunter and fifth in dressage.

Fellow competitor Lang said the equestrian challenge was the first event she had been to and she was just happy to be competing.

"There are so many things that I love about horse riding," she said.

"One of them is feeling free when I am on my horse's back."

"I love the connection I have with my horse. In general, I love my horse as he has done so much for me and taught me a lot about riding."

Lang said after her experience in Narrogin she would try her hand at more competitions.

"I am going to the Albany Show and hopefully in the future I will enter more," she said.

"I am hoping to do more eventing competitions, which is a personal goal of mine."

Forbes has her own pedigree in equestrian competition and won three awards at the Dressage Western Australia awards earlier this year, including the Dressage WA Award, the Australian Warmblood Horse Perpetual Trophy and the Gran Espoir Perpetual Award.

Forbes said her previous competition experience helped her students that were new to the competition environment.

"My experience gives them some additional confidence at events," she said.

"Guiding them through warm-up and making sure they have enough time to have both themselves and their horses ready and calm before entering the arena."

Racing season underway at Mt Barker

THE Great Southern's first race meet for the season at Mount Barker on Sunday featured an even day of racing.

Trainer Des Atwell was the first to open his account with Long Knife Brother pipping Ice Maker in the opening race for the meeting.

Albany trainer Steve Wolfe didn't need long to get amongst the winners, with three-year-old Triggerfish beating Shez-abutoo over 1200m.

The Paul Hunter-trained Browning, with Mitchell Pate-man on board, romped home by more than two lengths to leave a quality field in its wake.

Four-year-old Tango Ora made an early impression on its rivals, winning by just shy of two lengths from the Steve Wolfe-trained Arrun Boy.

The win was trainer Roy Rogers' first for the meeting and with three starters in the race, he stood a good chance, but the Oratorio gelding was just too classy.

You Watching Me had a closer contest in race 5, sneaking home for trainer Aaron Bazeley over Fulzip.

Rogers came close to scoring a double in race 6 with Anna Amalia just falling behind the Roland Piercey-trained Majestic Man.

Peter Western's win with Kronos in race 7 rounded out the day's racing.

Healthy weekday lunch hacks

By AMBER CEKEREVAC

Owner BodyCare Health Club
THERE'S nothing wrong with eating out. But it can get expensive if you're doing it every day on your work lunch break. It can also be hard to make the best choices for your health when you're pressed for time.

There are many healthy and easy lunch recipes out there, but more often than not they require more preparation time and ingredients than you have on a weekday morning. Here are a few lunch hacks that will give you your healthy meal, but not leave you feeling hungry.

Who says salad can't be your friend?

Making a salad doesn't have to be the too-hard basket. When it comes to preparing a salad for your lunch box, the simpler the better (and often tastier). Keep it simple with 3 to 4 of your favourite ingredients for a quick and tasty win.

ANYTHING on toast

Avocado, tuna, salad, cottage cheese, or even last night's dinner – all of these go a treat on toast. Keep a loaf of bread in the work freezer so all you have to do is bring the toppings.

Leftovers? Yes please.

When you're making dinner, double the recipe so you have enough for lunch the next day. It takes no extra effort and the next morning you will be eternally grateful for the time saved. It will also save you money.

Greens + a protein + nuts + a simple dressing = A happy tummy
By following this simple formula and you can create an endless number of amazing lunchtime combinations. For example: spinach and rocket leaves, a couple of hard-boiled eggs, a handful of almonds and a splash of balsamic vinegar and olive oil.

Switch!

Try these simple fast food substitutions next time you're eating out:

- Exchange hot chips for rice or salad;
- Instead of deep-fried, opt for grilled options;
- Choose a glass of water over a high sugar drink (yep, that includes juice); and
- Ensure that you're always hydrated when you're feeling hungry.

Healthy eating starts with your next food shop, so try to fill your trolley with more fruits and vegetables, and you'll increase your chances of making better choices for every meal, not just lunch.

Bulls' unbeaten ton

AN UNBEATEN ton from Nathan Crosby set up a confidence-boosting win against North County in their Albany Cricket Association A-grade match on Saturday.

Crosby continued his early season form with the bat, pairing with veteran Graham Wright (51) to take the Bulls to 228 runs for the loss of just four wickets at the end of their innings.

The opening batsman's 110-run knock included 11 boundaries, and he swung even bigger to bring up his hundred, winding up for a six to celebrate the century.

Despite the standout effort, the Bulldogs were not perturbed, getting off to a solid start with Aaron Williams and Michael Ferreira combining for 41 runs before Ferreira was dismissed on 21.

Ferreira's brother Matthew came and went without troubling the scorers, becoming the first of Alex Fergie's five victims for the match, which also included Bulldogs veteran Craig Tonkin for a duck.

A mid-innings resistance led by English import Reiko Parker-Cole (34) and Scott Ganzer (38) got the Bulldogs back in the match.

But their tail didn't quite wag long enough and they were dismissed for 168 in the 37th over, with Mt Barker donning 22 of those runs with wides.

The win has thrown the Bulls into the congestion at the top end of the ladder, with North County, Railways and Manypeaks all bunched together with two wins and 13 points each.

Collingwood Park notched their first win for the season against Royals with Ben Grey doing the damage with the ball again.

Grey nearly pinched his second hat-trick in as many weeks during a spell that took the game away from Royals as they failed to chase down Collingwood Park's 171-run total.

Grey finished with 4/12 from five overs to add to last week's five-wicket effort, and Royals were dismissed for 112.

Railways amassed a big first innings total of 283 runs as they headed west to play Denmark.

Mark Natale snuck in a century (101) before Dan Robson bowled him, but it was enough to set up the innings for Railways, with contributions from Coen Marwick (43) and Hayden Davies (46).

In reply, Denmark's middle order put up a solid fight after openers

Robson and Carey Green were both dismissed for single figures. But the fight wasn't enough to close the gap on Railways' big total, with the Magpies reaching 144.

Round four's A-grade fixtures feature: Mt Barker vs Royals, Collingwood Park vs North County, Manypeaks vs Denmark, Railways - bye.

Hill climb sell-out

THE chance to drive a bit faster than the speed limit up Albany's Marine Drive has proven too tempting for motoring enthusiasts, with tickets for the Raceways Sprint selling out in less than 24 hours.

Event director Jonathan Murray said the 3km Middleton Beach Hill Climb had exceeded all expectations for ticket sales.

"The level of interest has been nothing short of astounding," he said.

"It looks like it will become an iconic headline event in its own right."

Tickets are still available for the standard competitor entries for the 1/4 mile and 1/2 roll racing sessions at Albany Airport over the March long weekend.

Murray said the future of Raceways would be centered around more non-competitive car culture events.

"Runway racing will continue to underpin the event with strong support for ancillary events like the hill climb," he said.

"To keep growing we need to increase off-track activities, especially those that make use of the region's world-class natural advantages and tourism infrastructure.

"Over the run until the December holidays, we'll be announcing new non-competitive and social aspects of the event people can participate in as we look to grow the event."

Murray said Albany's status as a motorsport town was further cemented following the City of Albany's approval to purchase land for the Great Southern Motorplex last month.

"Albany has been at the heart of WA's motorsport history since the 1930s," he said.

"With new developments like the Great Southern Motorplex now on the horizon, Albany is ideally positioned to further entrench its position at the heart of our community."

"Ultimately motorsport, while not to everyone's taste, is to everyone's benefit both socially and economically."

"It's great to see Albany capitalise on the opportunities this sector presents."
