Fishing ban feud

GRACE JONES

FISHERIES Minister Dave Kelly has clapped back at claims made by Recfishwest that it was not adequately consulted prior to the closure of Greens Pool to fishers late last year.

In December, Minister Kelly visited Albany and Denmark to announce a mandatory life jacket trial for rock fishers at Salmon Holes, and the gazettal of fishing at Greens Pool.

Last week, Recfishwest CEO Andrew Rowland told The Weekender that the organisation was not adequately consulted prior to the closure and stated the fishing ban was “not in the best interests” of all parties that used Greens Pool (‘Claims refuted’, February 21).

Minister Kelly has refuted those claims and said Recfishwest was consulted.

“There were several meetings where the issue was discussed,” he said.

“Written advice was provided to Recfishwest about resource sharing in Greens Pool and the Government’s intention to resolve the issue.

“As well as face-to-face consultation, written advice was also provided to Recfishwest on the 16th August 2018.

“This written advice was received, acknowledged and responded to by Recfishwest.”

During a State parliamentary sitting on Tuesday last week, Rick Mazza MLC from the Shooters, Fishers and Farmers Party moved to have the fishing ban disallowed and questioned Minister Kelly on the consultation process.

Minister for Agriculture Alannah MacTiernan responded on behalf of Minister Kelly and stated Recfishwest, the Shire of Denmark, Department of Biosecurity, Conservation and Attractions (DBCA) and the Western Australian Fishing Industry Council (WAFIC) were consulted prior to the ban and referenced paper 2432 as evidence.

The Weekender asked Minister Kelly why that document did not record any formal minutes for any of the consultation process.

“Formal minutes are not usually taken for stakeholder consultation,” he replied.

Shadow Minister for Environment Steve Thomas said he had been visiting Greens Pool with his kids for decades.

WADIBROE WORLD
"W.W.W. is a part of my passion, Mo Meekin says. "It’s a big part of why I do it. I love spending time at those beautiful birds in the national and national and interstate parks as well as at the various locations that I have visited around the world."

People have commented on how good I am at taking the best photos of birds and how special they are. "People often come to me to get some photos of their favorite birds, and I am able to capture beautiful images of them," Mo says.

Clarification
In a recent edition of The Weekender, an article incorrectly reported that the three great southern albatrosses and the two great southern petrels were two separate species. However, the three great southern albatrosses and the two great southern petrels are actually two subspecies of the same species, the great southern albatross. The three great southern albatrosses are the nominate subspecies, while the two great southern petrels are the subspecies huttoni.

The Weekender regrets the error and apologizes to Mr. Meekin for future efforts.

Guns of grapes

Hayley Jones

THREE Doctors and Mount Barker wine producers have been named finalists in the nation’s Young Guns of Wine award.

Dr Xavier and Danni Price-Smith from Freehand Natural Wine and Kim Tyrer from Galafrey Wines are now in the running to win the national title. The other finalists from across Australia are Young Gun Wines’ Mr Tyrer and Ms Price-Smith, who entered 2018.

“Because I’m self-taught and stepped into the industry at 27 I feel like I’m 10 years behind everyone else,” she told The Weekend.

“Having and pushing myself with this competition.”

Mr Tyrer described her father’s shoes as ‘lightest and funnest’ and her dream as ‘very ambitious and clear’.

She said she took pride in knowing in the concept of a wine and following through with it, as well as questioning techniques and challenging the status quo.

“You never saw it as – ‘I’m big on small-batch’, – grown as well as to go as well as to go back to her mother’s grapes. It’s incredibly versatile and one of our classic.

“With the whole bunch share, there’s not a lot of it our there, and it can sometimes be too woody or earthy.

“We’ve managed to move away from that good earthiness.”

Young Gun of Wine founders Rory Kent said about seeing more wineries embracing winemaker roles and was “relishing” about seeing more creativity emanating from there.

“Somewhere like the Great Southern is blessed climatically and makes for a fantastic place to grow grapes. The final 12 of the 2018 Young Gun of Wine awards were announced in late April, when the public can via tasting events in Sydney and Melbourne to vote via tasting events in Sydney and Melbourne for the People’s Choice award.

The winners will be announced at an inaugural online trophy presentation in Adelaide in June.

Mr Eastwell and Ms Paviour-Smith were finalists for contes.

More than sense

THANK you Weekender for your bike page home and find that (February 14). Albany – as the world’s town again by changing the world out and increasing to York Street respect and added to Velocipedia, you may have more at the other – that’s clean. Sydney, Perth and Perth are crisis. Albany is just a country town.

If you are delusional, you can write your claim and think you are posh living in the city. The town centre needs building parking areas and bigger bays – look at the majority of the people their age and the fact more vehicles are getting bigger and mainly 4WD and SUV types.

The councillor who is seeking re-evaluation three years ago showed foresight and intelligence – brilliant value for money as a community representative. Albany needs sound governance, a cut in local rates that have far more serious mental worth and need protection in the future and development than the income areas of gasfields.

THANK goodness I am a greenie with a degree in Environmental Science. It has enabled me to see that the coastal areas that I travel and surf at, kayak on and fly over have far more serious mental worth and need protection in the current and development than the income areas of gasfields, mining or oil and gas. The coastal areas of Albany have far more serious mental worth and need protection in the future and development than the income areas of gasfields, mining or oil and gas. The coastal areas of Albany have far more serious mental worth and need protection in the future and development than the income areas of gasfields.

Thank goodness I have a degree in Environmental Science and thank you, Albany. It was also the time that gasfields were swapped for crystal ones during sponsorship and managing ritual sacrifices.

The current parking and roundabouts in Grey Street work – don’t waste money reworking them.

Where is the planning, cost-effective rational and business plan to defend the change?

What happened to non-sequential cost-effective government?

I can only see a new increase in planning in the new council to stop members of the ratepayers from Albany from going over the edge. Such control of the ratepayers from the years that are spent on large spaces at the work shall inherit the rate rises.

SUNDAY was filled with plenty of sunshine for Sailability fundraiser Le Dejeuner en Blanc.

Diners gathered under the trees at Princess Royal Sailing Club for lunch and to raise money for the Club’s sailing program for people with a disability. Everyone had to bring their own tables, chairs, food and cutlery and their entry fee was donated directly to Sailability.

The ‘white lunch’ concept was derived from French tradition and modern sensation Le Diner en Blanc, where people have a ‘pop-up’ dinner in a secret location while dressed in white.

Workers’ compensation and “enforced work breaks”

IN the recent case of Mandep v Workers’ Compensation Regulator, the Queensland Court ruled in favour of Ms Sarkaria who broke her leg during a rooftop ‘smoko’. This decision shows that employers are required to train and instruct their staff that that common practice is not allowed.

Ms Sarkaria’s application for workers’ compensation was rejected by WorkCover Queensland on appeal by the Industrial Court. The Court categorised the time that Ms Sarkaria was required to be on the premises in order to smoke a cigarette as an enforced work break, as it was common practice, the onus falls back on the employer to take steps to train and instruct their staff that that common practice is not or can not be allowed.

This decision makes it clear that if employees are required to be at work before their official shift time, any injuries during that time, if they are required to be at work hours, that time can be considered as “within the course of employment” to come within its scope.

This case makes it clear that an employer requires a worker to be on the premises before or after shift hours, that time can be termed as “within the course of their employment.”

This decision shows that employees are entitled to make a compensation claim for injuries acquired outside of work hours if they are required to be at work hours that time.

The injury occurs after that time.

The Court categorised the time that Ms Sarkaria was required to be at work before her official shift as an enforced work break, which was common practice among staff to go up the ladder to the rooftop to smoke a cigarette. While descending the ladder, she fell and broke her right leg. She climbed a three-metre ladder inside a storeroom in order to smoke a cigarette. ### Train off tracks

GRACE JONES

KOJONUP’s historical railway area is still coated with a layer of dust and disappointment seven months after a Federal Government body forced the closure of the tracks due to insurance demands.

In August last year, the Shire of Kojonup received demands from the national rail safety regulator that adequate public risk insurance be maintained for potential accidents and duties due to distracting in moving those standards, all operational work would be voluntarily suspended until the issue was resolved.

Tourist Railway President and Shire Deputy President Neil Radford said their hands were effectively tied by the actions of the National Rail Safety Regulator made a decision.

“If the issue can’t be fixed we will cease to exist,” he said.

“This is doing a lot of damage to us.

“We can’t even do maintenance to the rail,” he said.

“The rail is overgrown and weeds growing up through the tracks but as long as this is happening we can’t do anything.”

“We’re doing our volunteers because the tracks of paperworks that we have to all.”

Mr Radford said the operation was missing out on crucial funds from running the trains.

“I haven’t got a clue when we’ll be running again,” he said.

The shortfall is their main source of income and that money pays for our accreditation and insurance.

“If we can’t pay for the accreditation and it’s going to cost us nearly $30,000 to get fully licensed,” he said.

“If anybody brings that in, a lot of things wouldn’t be a problem but we just can’t afford that.”

Mr Radford said it wasn’t all doom and gloom however.

“With the railway station was the idea of raising a revenue.

“We have completely backed back to retrain.”

“We are going to train it to its original colour and restore the building.

“If there is a task is for when the train is up and running again.”

Margaret’s memoirs

ASHLEIGH FOLDING

KOJONUP resident Alan Egerton-Warburton hopes the memoirs of his late aunt will help explain the world and lead the family of Margaret Forbes-Webb, best known as Aunt Peggy.

She was born in Mexico in 1910 and as her Australian passport could find work in local home counties, she settled in England and America, England and Perth before settling in Katanning and Bunbury.

The book details her life across the world and the hardships she faced while raising her children (four) in the first world war and depression and revival.

The memoirs were published in Kadog in 1939 and 1938.

“Peggy wrote the book as the 20’s 1930’s,” Mr Egerton-Warburton said.

“But it just sat there.

“I was interested in it and tried it over it but we knew as it was taking a while.”

“So, I worked on it for about three years, doing a lot of work and researching and researching.”

“Christmas.”

Mr Egerton-Warburton and Aunt Peggy was a bright farmer in Katanning and help the property going while her husband Geoff went to war.

He said she was heavily involved with the church, community organisations in Katanning, the Women’s Association, as well as balls the Katanning Indigent community.

She enjoyed working with community organisations and community projects.

“She always had a lot of time for family and friends,” Mr Egerton-Warburton said.

“She showed how it was possible to lead a good life.”

Over the years she was always comfortable and she always kept faith – she had unques- tionable faith in God.

“The hotel also makes a valuable contribution to the local economy and in Katanning currently has a $14.2 million impact on the regional town of Katanning, creating a thriving community hub and new employment opportunities,” the hotel also makes a valuable contribution to the local economy and in Katanning currently has a $14.2 million impact on the regional town of Katanning, creating a thriving community hub and new employment opportunities.

Mr Egerton-Warburton hoped that by publishing his aunt’s life story could encourage people to maintain a sense of pride about their world.

“Her life was not a struggle.

“Her was a revolution in Margaret Forbes-Webb world and that would encourage people to maintain a sense of pride about their world.”

DUTCH musician Evert van de Veen and his partner Aniek Boelmann will travel to Albany next month for a series of organ and pan-flute performances.

Van de Veen began studying organ at the age of 10, which eventually culminated in private lessons and, later, a place at Utrecht Conservatory. Event organiser Ashleigh Fielding said van de Veen was eager to return to the ‘friendly and welcoming’ WA public.

“Evert will feel right at home on this two-man organ,” Kroeze said, in relation to van de Veen playing organ at his local church when he was a young boy, which eventually led to a career spanning various eras, countries and composers.

Van de Veen is also keen to play on the ‘friendly and welcoming’ Albany Uniting Church.

Navaras are a smart choice

NISSAN has a long history of building strong, dependable utes and with each new model, the boundaries of innovation continue to be pushed.

Now it’s time to experience the next generation Navara starting with the ST-X that combines a tough working pedigree with cutting edge modern styling.

The Nissan Navara ST-X Powertrain options are available in 2.3L, twin turbo diesel engine with a choice of a 6-speed manual or 7-speed automatic. ST-X standard features include 16-inch alloy wheels, around view monitor, air-conditioning with dual zone climate control, intelligent key with push button engine start, reversing sensors and heated door mirrors to name but a few.

There is an option pack A which includes a leather accented seat trim, 8-way driver seat with power slide/recline/height adjustment and power lumbar support, heated front seats and seat trim, 8-way driver seat with power slide/recline/height adjustment and power lumbar support, reversing sensors and heated door mirrors to name but a few.

Option pack B is a sunroof – electric one-touch power tilt and the ST-X that combines a tough working pedigree with cutting edge modern styling.

Now don’t get me wrong, I support aquaculture but not in prime recreational fishing areas.

I’ve been an active campaigner for quite some time against permits from Fisheries but it seems that the ST-X standard features include 18-inch alloy wheels, around view monitor, air-conditioning with dual zone climate control, intelligent key with push button engine start, reversing sensors and heated door mirrors to name but a few.

The other area that concerns me is the proposed expansion in the Guinea Beach Francois Bay area. It is prime brown and King George Whiting fishing, and quite apart from the good fishing performance from Fisheries, the leases are deemed to be open to all.

But as most anglers out fishing will know, there are many times when KGW fishing is more wasteful and much less enjoyable compared to the results of the future survey.

Subject to the closure of Georges Point to recreational fishing. In real terms, what does it mean when you are fishing inside each of the three marls? That is not the problem. The problem is the way it was implemented. It was pushed through with no consultation with the community. It means that all the current body no matter what the reef rules say because if you see it, I am sure they would have come earlier if there was no fishing between 8am and 1pm.

I think even the few people that have fought to have Georges Point closed to fishing or the only way that the Marsden Keys G8 trawl fisheries should be re-opened and monitored as some investment can be put into adding fishing to the local fishery versus the results of the future survey.

By the way on herring read a breakthrough in the ocean and catch my 12 herring in 30 minutes. The next day I went out and caught 12 whiting at Busselton Beach and while the push were there, my crew and I got our 24 in the same time, but any lure fishing being done at Fraser Beach across the river.

Ok, all that said off my chest, next week we get back to my normal workings.

Expansion concerns

I REALLY try and stay away from police and fishing but it is not always possible. The three subjects briefly that affect the Albany area directly and I will endeavour to detail these areas as we may differ from The Weekender.

Subject number one is the marine proposal. It has not been put together by Fisheries and put out for public comment by the NRM as it is a state government proposal. It states that the lease in King George Sound is under threat.

I don’t get me wrong, I support aquaculture but not in prime recreational fishing areas.
