WA passes dying laws

THE long road to legalising voluntary euthanasia in Western Australia culminated in a crescendo of applause on Tuesday night after State Parliament made history to pass the Voluntary Assisted Dying Bill, the second of its kind in the country.

Legislation that gives people the right to choose the end of their life in special circumstances has been a controversial topic across the globe. There are currently six countries, six states in America and now two states in Australia where people at the end of their life can access voluntary euthanasia.

Premier Mark McGowan said in passing the Bill the WA Government had given many members of the community hope.

“This is a remarkable moment for Western Australia and will go down in history as one of the biggest, most important and significant pieces of reform delivered,” he said.

During the final reading of the Bill, the Lower House was required to read and pass 55 amendments the Upper House had added to the Bill after 105 hours of debate.

Health Minister Roger Cook said the amendments largely codified what was already good medical practice or made areas of the legislation explicit what was already implicit.

“The VAD Bill will complement the provision of the high quality care we expect for our elderly patients and those in palliative care,” he said.

“WA and Victoria will be leading the nation on a major social reform, providing compassion and choice for people at end of life.”

The approved laws will take effect following an 18-month implementation phase and formation of an implementation panel to oversee the development of clinical guidance, medication protocols and training for participating health practitioners.

Albany Community Hospice (ACH) is one facility in the region people requiring palliative care can access, with the organisation accepting more than 200 admissions per year. Approximately 60 per cent of patients die at the Hospice.

“Hospices are on the front line providing care to people at the end of life,” said ACH Chair Jane Mouritz.

“As a result of the legislative changes regarding VAD, Albany Community Hospice will be undertaking extensive consultation and review of our position on this matter,” she said.

One of the 55 amendments passed, clause 9A, prohibits health care workers from initiating the discussion about VAD unless they are a medical practitioner or nurse practitioner and that they do so while also discussing all treatment and palliative care options.

The new laws will go into effect after an 18-month implementation phase.

WATER Minister Dave Kelly has defended his government’s approach to water supply after meeting with the Shire of Denmark.

Mr Kelly was keen to examine the concerns about water shortages in the region.

Groote EPB Shane From and the Shire of Denmark’s Dan Andrew said his government should have more transparency around the water plan.

"Not only has the Government not put the plan on paper, but also the legislation to change this..." he said.

Mr Kelly was trying to sell the idea of $13 million program to include a new pipeline to the Shire of Denmark.

"We have a long-term strategy to water security," he said.

ASHLEY FIELDING

AN ALBANY-based fresh produce business has taken a new step towards reducing food waste by introducing freeze-dried produce.

Handmade strawberries, raspberries and blackberries are currently available at the Albany stock in September and began selling freeze-dried products last week.

Similar to Westsools’ "Odd Balls" the produce aims to produce perfectly edible food that may simply look bad or have minor imperfections.

"It's very easy for food to be thrown away because of looks," Ms Fielding said.

Artisans show off their wares

ALBANY CBD was bustling over the weekend and it all kicked off on Thursday and Friday with a handful of market stall events, including the Artisan and Designer Gift Fair.

The Fair was set up across two floors of Albany Public Library, as its usual venue - Albany Town Hall - is currently undergoing renovations.

From jewels to garden decorations, to festive biscuits and handwoven baskets, there was something for everyone on display and for sale.

Mapping out murals

Mount Barker - Shire of Plantagenet

The Shire of Plantagenet encompasses the spectacular Porongurup National Park and the Stirling Ranges and home to WA’s largest mountain peak, Bluff Knoll. A truly unique and breathtaking experience is the Granite Skywalk at Castle Rock in the Porongurup Range. Sprawling in the region presents an abundance of wildflowers, some only found in the region and provide a huge drawcard for people from all over Australia and beyond.

The town of Mount Barker is the commercial and service hub in the region, a highly regarded as one of Australia’s most awarded wine growing regions, specialising in outstanding cool climate riesling, chardonnay, cabernet sauvignon and pinot noir. Signature events are the Porongurup Wine Festival and the Grapes and Gallops Race Day.

Both are events that showcase all the very best of the Plantagenet Shire, the landscape, the fine wine and food produced locally and the vibrant community spirit.

The Mountains and Murals Festival – to brighten up small towns with murals and paintings.

Sgt Johnson said the festival was part of a plan to change a “ruined” main street with murals and paintings.

“The murals are amazing,” he said after the event.

“This probably couldn’t have happened without our hundreds of people coming through town and we’ve really appreciated their support.”

Sgt Johnson said the walk on Saturday drew up the boring brick walls around town.

Installation from water inspiration

ASHLEIGH FIELDING

A FILM installation inspired by water is now on display at Albany’s Vancouver Art Centre. Retired professional dancer Lara Lee’s Waterways project, which was created to showcase the artistry created by the artform of moving, has developed further in the arena of site-specific performance to that creation in Denmark.

Lee uses sculpture, film, sound and performance to express her artistic nature and has drawn on all those creative qualities for the Waterways project. “Water has been in my work for a long time, but this particular project was born from my experience of spending time at local water places with my family, and also from my experience of dancing with water as part of a family,” she explained.

“The first iteration of Waterways was a creative development in film and performance, which premiered two years ago as part of the 18-year-old son and a number of other young people interested in a career in the arts. “We then went on to collaborate with the Waterways Dance project based in the US. Lee said her group of project participants, ranging from eight to 65 years, and drawn from all around the world, including Ocean Beach and later presented a selection of works at the recent Danish New Works Festival in Denmark. “These multiple pieces have all gone in forming the next step in the Waterways project, creating a bit more than what we worked on previously,” she said. Lee uses the human body in particular as a form of social, cultural and environmental unifier.

“This particular project was born from my experience of dancing with water as part of a family,” she explained. “Lees said of local waterways, “Especially in this time of change and the loss of water shortage in the region.”

PERTH painter Mark Tweedie is the new artist-in-residence at Vancouver Art Centre. He has been a professional and personal experiences that support us all as artists and communities.” Lee said of local artist in residence programs, “These multiple pieces have all gone into forming the next step in the Waterways project, creating a bit more than what we worked on previously. Lees said of local waterways, “Especially in this time of change and the loss of water shortage in the region.”

“While he is in Albany, Tweedie is hosting a portrait and palette knife workshop. Bookings for the December 14 event can be made at marktweedie.com.au and there will be an art sale at marktweedie.com.au during 2020.”

Denmark’s MiA Art Group is presenting its annual summer display of work in two parts this year.

The first will be an exhibition of the works at Denmark Community Resource Centre from December 2 to December 5 and the second will be an art sale at Denmark Picture Framers during the same time period.

President Lynley Lally said the group, which comprises of Denmark residents, had created a series of works completely unique from each other. “When people come into any of our exhibitions, the most obvious and immediate reaction is the diversity of the work we create in the creation of art,” she said.

“We have 20 members and no two members do the same style. The group dabbles in printmaking, pastels, handmade watercolor, pen, pencil, hand painted silk, resin, hand carved wood, photography, and sculpture, to name a few art forms,” Lally said.

“The special thing about buying something from our group is that it is all locally produced with passion from the artists,” she said. “Over 10 years, we have painted and sold hundreds of works that support us all as artists and communities.”

Artist settles in

ASHLEIGH FIELDING

ALBANY’s Waterways Dance project, based in Denmark, has expanded to a new artist-in-residence at Vancouver Art Centre.

Vancouver Art Centre artist-in-residence Mark Tweedie.

Tweedie recently stayed in the historic ghost town of Cossack for a month to explore memory, lineage and ageing,” Tweedie explained. “My most recent exhibition was based on old photographs and embroidered with my own childhood memories. “It’s imperative for me to find a connection to my subject, whether that be a location, person of a shared experience,” Tweedie said.

“She hopes Waterways at Vancouver Art Centre will trigger higher thinking about local and global issues. “I hope to obtain a feeling of appreciation and comfort in the manage memorabilia that support us all as artists and communities.” Lee said of local artist in residence programs, “These multiple pieces have all gone into forming the next step in the Waterways project, creating a bit more than what we worked on previously. ASHLEIGH FIELDING

ISSUES that regularly confront people and his life of Albany have inspired Dave Price's latest album.

The Dave Price Project's album and Albany-based Price hopes to draw people of "his age" into the event to have a night out on the town.

"It's a very fun night out and we're looking forward to having a good time," he said.

"And people my age don't often do things like that, so hopefully they'll come out for this.

Price has been playing music around Albany for more than four decades. He gave it up eight years ago for a break but found himself writing again in 2016.

"I had a health scare and ended up having open heart surgery," Price said.

"So I had a bit of time off and I decided to start writing again. I love writing and the songs were there.

"My music reflects many facets of people's lives. They're about what concerns people these days and what people have to handle these days. - And Albany as well. I've always had a high regard for Albany and for me, I've always found it an amazing place, but a lot of people tend to dismiss it.

The Dave Price Project will be supported by The Grey Whiskers Band and The Place has been described as a "must see show".

The show kicks off at 8pm and door entry is $10 per person.

Born and raised in Albany, Price said he had a high regard for Albany and for him, he had always found it an amazing place, but a lot of people tend to dismiss it.

My blond haired Comet has five children, ages five to 21, with heights ranging from just over 1m to a couple of 2m+. Well, if we are looking to go anywhere then ... this is for the car.

The Ssangyong Stavic is South Korea means Russia and in more ways than one, once you drive it in person, you come to that exact conclusion. This model in 2014, has done 40,000km with the best feature is the low price of $17,000.

But the most immediate and pleasing aspect of this car was the potential 2L turbo diesel engine, not only in terms of fuel economy, but due to the electrically controlled, automatic transmission — in association with Mercedes-Benz.

štavic seats seven in luxury

In relation to the engine and chassis in payloads being put on the car.

My car is a seven-seater but only two back seats take the place of the boot as it is not the most comfortable arrangement especially when those passengers are over 1m to a couple of 2m+.

The five children, ages five to 21, are five extremely comfortable, Stavic seats seven in luxury gold lounge equivalent seats.

So how does the Stavic stack up against the two back seats take the place of the boot so it is not the case that something can be loaded on them.

The boys again came up with a couple of different ideas in the $50 bracket. The first one is a white squid that only came up with that when I travelled down Albany Highway to Trailblazers. The other item was Tackle’s Twisty lures. These lures will catch like herring, salmon and south coast favourites.

This year I thought I would do a bit of a guide for the Weekender as to what people could buy as a present for a fisher. When I wrote it I reconciled if people would read it, and pleasantly surprised to be in both local tackle shop last year when customers asked for the book that I had read about in this paper.

This Christmas I wrote a bit of a guide for the Weekender as to what people could buy as a present for a fisher. This Christmas I thought I would do a bit of a guide for the Weekender as to what people could buy as a present for a fisher.

The other thing he suggested was one of Halco eggs. I liked that one because I guarantee it will be in both local tackle shop last year when customers asked for the book that I had read about in this paper.

In the final category he has some nice out and about stuff that comes with a couple of different ideas in the $50 bracket. The first one is a white squid that I then travelled down Albany Highway to Trailblazers so the fisher can the $1000 range, and at the $500 range.

So, this year I thought it would be in both local tackle shop last year when customers asked for the book that I had read about in this paper.

The other thing he suggested was one of Halco eggs. I liked that one because I guarantee it will be in both local tackle shop last year when customers asked for the book that I had read about in this paper.

Some items any fisher would like under the Christmas tree that are available locally.

How to choose the right present ideas.

My first stop was at Jim Allen’s Albany Rod’s and Tackle down on Smiling Terrace. I asked Jim for ideas in three price ranges, around $20, $50 and $100. Here is what he came up with.

In the $20 range Jim Allen gave me a SquidEzy. This lure has a nice out and about stuff that comes with a couple of different ideas in the $50 bracket. The first one is a white squid that I then travelled down Albany Highway to Trailblazers so the fisher can the $1000 range, and at the $500 range.

In the $50 range he came up with a range of reels from Sil- dered if people would read it, and pleasantly surprised to be in both local tackle shop last year when customers asked for the book that I had read about in this paper.

Gifts for the festive fisher

COLUMN COURTESY OF ALLAN’S ALBANY ROD’S

LAST Christmas I wrote a bit of a guide for the Weekender as to what people could buy as a present for a fisher. I am lucky enough to have a couple of fisher reel and they are a great tool to use and if you can afford one, treat yourself or your family fisher to a special Christmas present.

I hope you both use and treat that special person in your life to a bit of fishing gear this Christmas as a treat towards one.

Clubhouse craft day

The Outlook at Albany hosted a Christmas Fair and Craft Day last weekend at its clubhouse.

From 10am to 3pm on Sunday, visitors were invited to peruse handmade goods such as soap, candles, jewellery, knitwear and crocheted items, and have a bite to eat from the selection of Devonshire tea and market treats, a sausage sizzle and from the coffee van.

The Outlook at Albany resident Dick Glass sold Snapdragons to raise funds for a special charity and donate the venue, which he said he creates completely from recycled bits and bobs.

Fellow residents and his family often save their old jars, tins, aluminium cans and foil to keep his hobby. Mr Glass said it was the perfect way to keep his mind active now that he is retired.

The Outlook at Albany is an over 55s lifestyle village and is located on Alison Parade in Bayment Head.

Taj launches debut novel

BUDDING author Taj Dennison recently launched his debut book, Man in a Glass Box, at Velocity, thus starting his publishing career. Taj’s book, originally outlined the melodramatic story of a young man on the cusp of adulthood, and was revised to create an emotional narrative that was enjoyed by the launch audience.

Taj, who has dyslexia, had written the 35000-word manuscript in 18 months as part of his HSC program. The launch was attended by all staff and students of the school, many of whom also worked on the book by fitting in writing sessions in their school day.

The wonderfully supportive school staff encouraged Taj to bring his manuscript to them, and the final book was printed. Taj’s novel was a mixture of truths and fiction, and was reviewed by his English teachers.

What particularly impressed other students was the dead Taj’s voice, and he was able to let them know that a treasures and learning research skills can greatly benefit a school. The book will be being reviewed by an author.

Taj is a member of the Western Mountaineering School and was a recipient of the City of Albany’s Senior School Prize.
