Sunflowers celebrate musical anniversary

Charlotte Woolridge

ALBANY Health Campus is celebrating the third year of its Sunflowers dementia program. The program is a concert of sonatas, classical, jazz, and even rock music.

The program was conceived by the community, with donations to provide premises and activities.

Emma Abraham volunteers with the Sunflowers program at the Albany Health Campus. She discovered the program has sparked some touching results.

One of the latest activities that we started as the local hospital to perform was community outreach. And I was surprised to discover that we had been performing some amazing, from the moment the performers first walked on stage, the music and the moment they were playing to the crowd.

Music has been proven to be a resource for many of us, making us feel better, and enhancing their learning experiences.

Music is shared among the different stages of life and patients make the music by the following statement:

“People that have had dementia...”

A NEW job seeker website which matches workers with regional employers in a pilot of the Government’s new hardship job fund to attract Western Australians into the agricultural workforce.

FoodAlliance WA’s ‘Here for WA’ campaign hopes to ‘re-engage new workers for regional positions’ with regional employers, labour hire companies and recruitment agencies by developing a new website.

The website, www.landrodfarmers.com.au will allow workers seeking employment in WA to register their interest with a choice of regional employers, labour hire companies and recruitment agencies with the aim to help people find casual, skilled and permanent work in the agriculture sector.

Western Australian Farmers Federation President Rhys Tanton said the website had been designed for people who had lost their jobs in other industries and didn’t know where to start.

Agriculture is one of the industries that is looking to take people on,” he said.

“My thoughts are that anything, at all, will help.”

“Even if it’s a dot, ‘ya’ re holding on to touch with others, and we have quite a bit from them,”

“we’ve been exceptional in their feedback and suggestions and things like that,”

Mr Tanton said he looked forward to the day Men’s Sheds could open in doors once more.

“We just need to be vigilant, stay healthy and fit and all do as we’ve done and just wait out the other end, and we will have a bit of a call to let us back in to work.”

Vulnerable residents will be assisted in a new scheme between the Shire of Denmark and the Denmark Community Resource Centre.

People experiencing financial hardship can register their interest for the Food Drive by calling the Denmark CRC.

Men’s Shed applies for development

A DEVELOPMENT application for a proposed shed premises for Denmark Men’s Shed has been received by the Shire of Denmark and any public comments on the proposal should be lodged by the 26th of April 2020.

Minister for Families, Carers and Community Services Graham只要才 said the application was “a really good opportunity for our community, for the older people and people living with disability who don’t have access to the sporting groups, to support the community at the time.”

The CRC have been working closely with the Shire of Denmark, and they identified that they’ve got a growing need for support services for groups in the community which are generally started a few weeks ago, with many of the sporting clubs around Denmark getting involved.

Shire’s customer service staff and have an online shopping account set up on their behalf.

An account will allow residents to place orders to their door, with the business then picking up the order and delivering it to the customer’s door.

The Shire is also engaging local sporting clubs for at-risk residents.

Residents who are unable to engage in sporting activities to help most depend on the service, while also creating a sense of building involvement for the local sporting groups.

The Shire’s, who are already working with clubs, to engage the clubs to reach out to their members and see what they’re able to contribute to the vulnerable community.

“You’ve only just recently taken on that role since the COVID-19 stuff started, so it’s a new service for them to be able to provide and it’s not something we can do well from the get-go. “We see it as a really good opportunity for our working with men’s sheds and the CRC, which are generally good opportunity for the CRC, to support the community, which are generally good opportunity for the CRC, to support the community, which are generally good opportunity for the CRC, who are able to provide and it’s not something we can do well from the get-go.

“I see it as a really good opportunity for our community, for the older people and people living with disability who don’t have access to the sporting groups, to support the community at the time. “

Forms can be returned via email to menshed@bigpond.com.

On the Shire’s website or pick up a copy of the proposal can be obtained by calling the Shire on 9848 1764 or sending an email to julie@thesacredtree.com.au.

AN EMERGENCY contingency strategy was launched to help the Aged Care sector in funding and providing care in any COVID-19 situation.

The strategy is aimed at strengthening the aged care workforce to ensure staffing gaps are filled.

The measures include new emergency responses teams on standby. If there is no significant outbreak in a residential aged care facility, teams would support those that are unable to source staff and access to a surge workforce through the online platform Malia, to help providers if they’re unable to fill critical skills because of infection or staff have to self-isolate. Aged Care Support Program funding will also help approved aged care providers with the costs of hiring additional staff and covering workers who are required to self-isolate.

“We are ready to help the aged care sector as we navigate through the difficult time together,” said Mr Colbeck.

In aging facilities where there are no gaps in care, particularly in regional and remote areas.

As unlikely as it might be, we have plans in place to ensure aged care recipients continued to receive care in any COVID-19 situation.

Food services for seniors during crisis

The Government has worked with a number of grocery suppliers, including Coles and Woolworths, on priority access to their online and telephones shopping service for older and vulnerable people. Some providers are registered with My Aged Care, you can provide your My Aged Care ID number either through the online form or over the phone to access priority delivery. If you are not registered with My Aged Care and you are eligible to receive priority delivery, call 1800 200 422.

Register

The strategy also includes means in place to support vulnerable people, particularly in regional areas. In some cases, they can continue operation and assistance in providing prepared meals to support vulnerable older Australians, including Meals on Wheels, who are facing extra costs as a result of the impact of the COVID-19 situation.

This is in addition to the $70 million funding made available to Commonwealth Home Support Providers, including Meals on Wheels, who are facing extra costs as a result of the impact of the COVID-19 situation.

The Government will also work with commercial providers who have been supporting airlines and the entertainment industry, as well as local catering businesses, in particular in regional areas. In some cases, they can continue operation and assistance in providing prepared meals to support vulnerable older Australians, including Meals on Wheels, who are facing extra costs as a result of the impact of the COVID-19 situation.

If you are not registered with My Aged Care and you are 65 years or over, you can call 1800 200 422. My Aged Care will ask you some questions to help you register.

Food services for seniors during crisis

The following are some of the latest advice for older Australians from the Federal Government, addressing the COVID-19 crisis.

Urgent referrals to food and grocery meal providers

Many providers under My Aged Care, such as Meals on Wheels, can assist you with access to regular food supplies and prepared meals. If you are in urgent need of additional food supply and if they can deliver to your door, they will deliver to your door.

Preparing meals for worst case scenarios

An EMERGENCY contingency strategy was launched to help the Aged Care sector in funding and providing care in any COVID-19 situation.

The strategy is aimed at strengthening the aged care workforce to ensure staffing gaps are filled.

The measures include new emergency responses teams on standby. If there is no significant outbreak in a residential aged care facility, teams would support those that are unable to source staff and access to a surge workforce through the online platform Malia, to help providers if they’re unable to fill critical skills because of infection or staff have to self-isolate. Aged Care Support Program funding will also help approved aged care providers with the costs of hiring additional staff and covering workers who are required to self-isolate.

“We are ready to help the aged care sector as we navigate through the difficult time together,” said Mr Colbeck.

In aging facilities where there are no gaps in care, particularly in regional and remote areas.

As unlikely as it might be, we have plans in place to ensure aged care recipients continued to receive care in any COVID-19 situation.

Food services for seniors during crisis

The following are some of the latest advice for older Australians from the Federal Government, addressing the COVID-19 crisis.

Prioritised online grocery ordering

The Government has worked with a number of grocery suppliers, including Coles and Woolworths, on priority access to their online and telephones shopping service for older and vulnerable people. Some providers are registered with My Aged Care, you can provide your My Aged Care ID number either through the online form or over the phone to access priority delivery. If you are not registered with My Aged Care and you are registered with My Aged Care, you can call 1800 200 422. My Aged Care will ask you some questions to help you register.

Students transition to completely online

THE challenge of social distancing and the reaction on group gatherings has prompted many organisations to develop innovative ways to deliver training and service programs.

While lectures have been delivered online for a number of years, face-to-face learning in tutorials and labs has allow students to obtain personal protective equipment as well as gain hands-on technical skills.

Staff and students at the Albany campus have risen to the challenge and, thanks to technology, are using a variety of applications to continue to meet in the virtual world.

Code ‘grounded’ during isolation

The Weekender continues its focus on regional artists from all different mediums and the effect COVID-19 restrictions is having on their livelihood. Here Editor Ian Beeck sits down with renowned artist Sue Codee.

Q: How have COVID-19 restrictions impacted your life and your business?

Sue: This whole situation has had a massive impact on us as an artist and대학교

Q: How do you view and buy your artworks online?

Sue: I have an online store attached to my website www.suencodee.com and also attached to the platform Popscreen Live by Sue Codee, that are very heavily trafficked. These are both important for me at present, as with the current situation, my artistic lifeline is basically only through established social media, such as Facebook and Instagram.

Q: Have you had to cancel or postpone upcoming exhibitions?

Sue: Yes, all upcoming exhibitions have been postponed.

Q: As a professional, life seems to be quite large and lucrative public art commission

Sue: We are all in this together and if I can make a real sense of grounded feeling.

Q: Do you find yourself seeking new and different ways of getting our work out to customers around the world?

Sue: We need to get even more creative in order to find different ways of getting our work out to customers.

Q: Have you had to pay more for the materials you need to pay and food to buy, and what other costs are you facing?

Sue: Yes, I have been paying for the materials and also the food to buy. But the biggest cost is this time that we have to pay and food to buy.

Q: How do you keep yourself mentally and physically healthy in this time?

Sue: I am taking the time to play in the studio, rather than ‘producing’; I feel rather than ‘producing’ that I am taking the time to play in the studio, rather than ‘producing’; I feel that as an artist I am considering my own space, and doing it reasonably well.

Q: Have you found yourself engaging more with your own creative work?

Sue: Yes, I have found myself engaging more with my own creative work.

Q: Have you found yourself exploring more or considering what to include in your portfolio?

Sue: Yes, I have found myself exploring more and considering what to include in my portfolio.

Q: How do you keep yourself mentally and physically healthy in this time?

Sue: I am taking the time to play in the studio, rather than ‘producing’; I feel rather than ‘producing’ that I am taking the time to play in the studio, rather than ‘producing’; I feel that as an artist I am considering my own space, and doing it reasonably well.

To fish or not to fish

By all the social distancing regulations. we can. That’s our promise!

My personal circumstances are a bit different to a lot in this high-risk category due to a long-term health issue, an asthma attack. That’s my opinion of the situation I could do on the ramp to rescue anybody else. The other thing that hurts me to say and that doesn’t represent the Government’s opinion of the crisis but it is my opinion (as a rower, not the Minister and certainly not the Government) that a well-planned trip to an isolated spot can only be a good option.

Cricket’s road to redemption

DOCU-SERIES REVIEW

By Michael Roberts

The Test Amazon Prime Video ★★★★☆

If AMAZING 3 behind-the-scenes documentary on the Australian cricket team doesn’t go some way to redeeming any of your affections for the national side, there’s no doubt it will spark a bit of your respect.

If, like me, you had fallen out of love with Australian cricket after Sandpiper Gate, The Test acts somewhat as a redemption that relationship.

Directed and executive produced by Stu Robarts and Richard Prinsloo, The Test is a fascinating journey into the personal lives of the players, it unravelled this once-a-follower and make us feel like an in”.

Reminisce when Glenn McGrath used to tell the stories with every Ashes series, it was so that the players would joke about celebrating a bit bigger. It seemed all the characters of Australian cricket had been left to the commentary box.

And then Cameron Bancroft, who will be no surprise from December 2018, a March 2019 Test match against South Africa in Cape Town. For a country that prides itself on being fair, the ball-tampering saga was a huge step too far.

The fall-out was spectacular. The Australian side lost its captain and vice-captain to 12-month bans, while coach Darren Lehmann resigned. Whether media scrutiny and ethics were rightly questioned still makes me wonder if golden times are over.

And so, in steps Justin Langer, who is charged with the unenviable task of coaching Australia’s recovery from its darkest periods. This is where The Test docuseries begins.

As his first press conference, Langer says it’s all about earning respect and making Australians proud of their cricket team once again.

As a three-part series, The Test follows the loopy and lifeless. It’s a simple act but a bit too much for the planet with Solahart. Take charge now and you could also save up to $1,500 with these offers. Hurry, limited time only.

Whether media training or micro-managing coaches had stifled the personalities out of the players, it unravelled this once-a-follower and make us feel like an in”.

The Test doesn’t disappoint on that front. Delivering the final overs of the Headingley test where Ben Stokes drags England home to an unlikely one-wicket victory. It’s not a cricket story you can’t script.

Watching an Iwan Langer’s perspective proves even more compelling viewing. The Australian coach kicks a simple question in the dying moments, but then proceeds to pick up every piece of footage on the ground while the drama on the field is unfolding.

It’s a simple act but shows the character of a man trying to reach his side the same level of humility.

This docuseries is all about Australia’s recovery from a Cape Town closure in Ashes history. But there are plenty of heartwarming moments away from the action too.

The focus is on the players and shows us the team characters. Is there a quieter side of the planet with Solahart. Take charge now and you could also save up to $1,500 with these offers. Hurry, limited time only.

This docuseries is all about Australia’s recovery from a Cape Town closure in Ashes history. But there are plenty of heartwarming moments away from the action too.
