CONTINUING Albany’s Anzac legacy and maintaining residents’ connection to the Anzac legend, the City of Albany is calling on community members to crochet or knit red and purple poppies to decorate Albany Heritage Park.

The Poppy Art at the Heritage Park project is open to everyone and simply invites people to contribute their handmade poppies.

Albany Regional Day Care is sharing alternative ways to make poppies out of old egg cartons and craft supplies which allow the whole family to get involved.

National Anzac Centre Team Leader Tanja Colby said while Albany Heritage Park is closed, it is important to give residents the opportunity to preserve their connection to the site and the Anzac spirit.

“There are numerous benefits to projects like Poppy Art at the Heritage Park such as retaining community connection, reflection on the importance of our history and what significance this period of time will mean in the future,” she said.

“The project offers a platform for participants to engage with something positive, that will benefit their mental health and give them something to look forward to being a part of when their artwork is on display.”

Poppies made by communities from outside the Great Southern region are more than welcome.

People can donate and deliver as many poppies as they wish to the front of the Forts Store or post them to the National Anzac Centre, PO Box 484, Albany WA 6331.

Happy Feet’s return brightens souls

As a group of pet owners changed their approach to dental care more than anyone想到 has been the case for the past few months, one local business has found a way to help.

Happy Feet Dentures

The business has seen a marked increase in the number of pets being brought in for dental care, with many owners choosing to have their pets’ teeth and gums checked by a professional.

"It’s been a challenging time for us, but we have noticed a trend towards more owners seeking help with their pet’s dental health," said Happy Feet owner Mr. Ross.

"We’re finding that many pet owners are now seeking out dental care services, which is good news for our business and for the health of our pets."

The increase in demand has been driven by a number of factors, including the increased time spent at home with pets and the desire to keep them healthy during the pandemic.

"It’s important for pet owners to be aware of the potential risks associated with dental issues in pets, such as pain, infection, and even heart problems," said Mr. Ross.

"We encourage pet owners to take their pets to the vet regularly to be checked and to take good care of their pets’ teeth and gums at home.

The pandemic has also seen an increase in the number of pets being taken in for dental care, with many owners choosing to have their pets’ teeth and gums checked by a professional.

COVID-19 – THE FACTS

YAKAMIA, Primary Albany Residential College and Al- bany Senior High School in the Southern District said they would not reopen until the end of the term. Both schools were operating under a ‘remote learning in school’ model, which involved live-teaching from school principals to classes. One teacher from the Yackamia Primary was in isolation and had been replaced by a new teacher.

Mark McGowan reminded people they needed to remain vigilant and not get complacent.

The region has seen more than 5,000 tests carried out over the past month, with an average of 14 active cases remaining.

There have been no issues or breaches discovered during this time and the public are to be commended.

In contrast, Albany Anglican Service Manager Carol Prince said her family and friends have remained the same.

We have seen no reduction in domestic violence over this period," she said.

"Braybrook, we are aware the COVID-19 restrictions have been seen by perpetrators to stop women accessing support networks, from leaving the home, of provoking women to take the perpetrator back.

COVID-19 and navigating parenting arrangements

Tenielle Fernando

* This column is intended as general information and does not contain personal advice. For specific, it is important to consider how each party's situation relates to their circumstances.

A parenting plan is essentially an agreement between both parties. It is a legally enforceable document that is documented in writing. A parenting order is an order made by the Family Court. When drafting a parenting plan, it is important to seek help from either a family dispute resolution service or a lawyer. As such, it is in your best interest to seek help from a lawyer to assist you in resolving the dispute.

The benefits of having a parenting plan

There are several requirements that need to be addressed in a parenting plan. Given there is a lot of uncertainty for parties to agree, it is important to think of a neutral venue to access legal representation, whether it is a family dispute resolution service or a lawyer.

Once the restrictions have been eased, it is common for parties to agree to a parenting plan. Computer modelling by experts predicted as many deaths will come from the battle of the Somme. Even as Australia enters a new time in its history, it is crucial to assess how best to help children and consider the attendance of Family Court.

How do you make a parenting plan?

A parenting plan does not have to be formal, however, there are steps to consider if the plan is to be made formal. It is important to consider if the plan is to be made formal or informal. Informal parenting orders are not a legally enforceable agreement and are not a legally enforceable agreement. Professional services often are bound by.

Foundation is stable

AS PART of Albany Community Foundation’s (ACF) commitment to connecting with the Albany and Great Southern community, they have partnered with the Weekender to bring readers a regular update of what they have been doing in the community.

ACF has recently launched a Facebook appeal in response to the COVID-19 and the economic dependency of the Albany community. The appeal led to over 2815500 donations of more than $40,000. But as the demand is still high, and new families are appearing at the Foodbank who have never sought assistance before, the continued support through donations and food is essential. To see how you can help, visit facebook.com/albanycommunityfoundation.

WE WAKE and stand at another dawn of a day without meaning, a world void of activity, the world we know by outside and feeling a deep sense of isolation. It is a world that feels like a world of being alone in the world.

Being connected and not being connected is important whether it is another person, a friend, family or a community. It may be a group via an internet, hobby, sport or spiritual belief. It could be a place, a connection too.

We are anchored to the world through our connections. It is these connections that provide us with meaning and surely purpose.

Connecting in this time of COVID-19 is different. We need to socially isolate, keep our distance, keep our footprint in society to the bare minimum. We need to find and re-establish our communities—and make new ones. We need to create new connections. This is even more difficult. We need to find new channels that provide us with a sense of connection to not feel lonely.

We can push through this by outside and feeling a connection to the world through our connections. It is these connections that provide us with meaning and surely purpose.

Establishing positive family routines

Family life is often smooth and successful when family members all know what their roles and responsibilities are. Routines can be a way of keeping your family healthy, happy and functioning well. Whether you enjoy your children washing up their dishes after dinner or your teenager doing homework each night, family routines can be a wonderful way to keep your family running smoothly and efficiently. There are some key things to consider before you begin to plan family routines.

Why do we need family routines?

• Weekly routines for family chores, like wash- ing and cleaning.
• Other routines in involving family members at home.

Family routines help to create a predictable home environment and can help to make your children’s roles and responsibilities more independent.

Routines: the basics

Routine is a way of doing things in the same way every time. Family routines are a systematic way of doing things that works for everyone in the family.

Family routines are good for them

Some children like to be in control of what happens around them. Family routines can help ensure that children know what is expected of them and what their roles and responsibilities are.

• Well planned: in a good routine, things happen in the same order each day. For example, you might all get up at the same time, have breakfast, and then go to work or school.
• Predictable: in a good routine, things happen in the same order each day. For example, you might all get up at the same time, have breakfast, and then go to work or school.
• Regular and consistent: in a good routine, things happen in the same order each day. For example, you might all get up at the same time, have breakfast, and then go to work or school.

Family routines can be a way of teaching children about what is expected of them. Children can learn how to manage their time and responsibilities.

• Getting together with family and friends.

Davis draws inspiration from nature

THE Weekender continues its exploration of the arts and entertainment world with a focus this week on Albany artist Annette Davis. Nature, history and contemporary art all feature in the work of Annette Davis.

"I was lucky to work on some interesting projects and meet some incredible artists who broadened my understanding of art," said Davis. "I studied art history, took an art course at an art gallery in Perth, and then left the art world behind for a while.

"I had taken art to create a "long time" to officially push for a creative career. My interest in nature and history as a near whammy for me."

Annette Davis makes a charcoal rubbing of a tree.

"I grew up in a creative environment and created various textiles, researching and organizing historical and contemporary art. I wanted to be a creative person and to create."

"I'm a member of MIX Artists and our annual themed exhibitions are useful in providing a platform for artists who haven't held a show."

"I love using many different materials. Davies says Davis is the perfect place for Davis, with its rich history, picturesque environment and numerous local artists."

"My favourite walk is the Great Southern Trail. The name is so loaded with meaning."

"I studied art history and began working as an art curator in Perth. When I left the art world I set up a small studio, having been working in the art world for a long time."

Recipe of the week

Recipe supplied by: Peter March

Tuna crostini

Ingredients (Serves 8)
450g fresh tuna
1 avocado, sliced
1/4 red onion
1 punnet cherry tomatoes halved
1/4 shaved red onion
20ml fresh lemon juice
20g pepitas
1 clove garlic
20g white wine vinegar
Method
1) Heat skillet on stove and cut your bread and toast then rub with garlic. Place slices of bread in skillet and toast on both sides, flip and rub the other side with garlic.
2) Add vinegar and lemon juice. Add tomatoes and place in bowl. Add avocado, mix well with vegetables.
3) Season with salt and pepper and add extra virgin olive oil. Add much of the olive oil from the tin back into top of mix.
4) Add fresh herbs and serve it on top of crostini.

Jordan airs in tell-all series

DOCSERIES REVIEW
By Michael Roberts

North

EVEN if you're the kind of person who doesn't follow sport, odds on you know who Michael Jordan is. Or at the very least, heard the name.
If Jordan wasn't bigger than the NBA, he certainly was on the world stage and had the foundation for future success. As your more typical West Coast native who watches cricket and footy, I'll admit I didn't know much about his earlier years or even that the Chicago Bulls' 1997-98 season was one of the most successful in the NBA. So, I was in for a treat watching the 10-part series released by ESPN and Netflix, with two episodes of The Last Dance airing in May.

The Last Dance is a 10-part docuseries on the Chicago Bulls' 1997-98 season, as the team, led by Jordan, races for its sixth straight NBA championship in eight seasons.

While the Bulls continue to dominate the NBA, there are unflattering moments off the field between players, coaches, team, and management. The series structures itself as an inside look at the 1997-98 season, with Chicago beyond the indulgent act of success in the 90s, but it's a tell-all tale of the organization.

Unlike Australian sporting teams of that era, there are camera-rolling the Bulls, and particularly Jordan, wherever they go.

There's no mistaking the Last Dance is essentially a Michael Jordan show, but there is a number of interesting side stories on behind the scenes of a massive sporting organisation.

An evident change in Jordan's attitude of controversy and management. Episode three helps us understand the wildcard-orange attitude of controversial NBA star Dennis Rodman. Episode four discusses Jordan's coaching philosophy. Episode five is a look into the investigations of Jordan's tactics as a coach, with flashbacks to see how the Bulls and Jordan got up to that point.

Episode two explores the rise of Bulls legend Scottie Pippen as he comes across as arrogant and selfish at times. With Jordan's talents, it would be hard to stay grounded, but he does.

Episode three helps us understand the wild, egotistical attitude of controversial NBA star Dennis Rodman. Episode four discusses Jordan's unique coaching philosophy.

In this series, we see Jordan's unique coaching philosophy. Jordan himself is a polarising figure during interviews.

The Last Dance is essentially a Michael Jordan show, but there is a number of interesting side stories on behind the scenes of a massive sporting organisation.

One morning in 1920, two elephants had wandered off the circus site. The mayor immediately rang Sgt Anderson at the Albany Police Station. Sgt Anderson then alerted the nearest police station to Harry Price’s, the elephant owner, home. The owner was roused to restrain the runaway elephant and managed to address the situation. One of the elephants was caught, and the other was held by the police. Finally, the keeper caught up with the escaping elephant and managed to load on the truck to return the elephant to the circus. The owner was then paid for the elephant’s return.

History

IF I told you that Albany has a long history of rampaging elephants, you may not believe me, but I would be half right. The tale of an escaped elephant is quite well known but further investigation shows that there was not one but two incidents involving elephants in the 1920s. Let me explain.

Albany was regularly visited by travelling circus troupes – Ashtons, Woff & Tudor Brothers, and many more. The company would arrive in town on the train and then move all the equipment by wagon through the streets to the circus site that was usually the Parade Street Reserve.

In August 1920, Woff & Tudor came in Albany. A group of locals, including the mayor, were present, with the wagon loaded with wooden fencing and cages towed by the 11 elephants in the troupe.

One wagon encountered mechanical problems on the way, and as a result, one of the elephants escaped. TheRoyal George Hotel

The elephant attacked the hotel by using its trunk, which became entangled with the repairer and decided to make his escape with the wagon still attached. He set off at pace down Frederick Street, towards the Royal George Hotel and made a sharp right turn into Stirling Terrace.

Orchard Park, where the elephant climbed the fence and escaped into the backyards. With help from his handlers, the elephant made its way to the nearest police station and was picked up by Sgt Anderson at the Albany Police Station.

They tried to calm the elephant by throwing a towel over its head, but it continued to rampage and had to be captured by police and a group of volunteers.

Harry’s startled son, Bill, had skied into a tree on the truck of the dunnies and asked someone at the Albany Police Station to send help to the circus.

The horseman eventually returned to the circus and the only one of the escapees that had not been caught was the elephant that had been roused to restrain the elephant. The owner was then paid for the elephant’s return.

In 1990, when another circus came to Albany, Jack Barney said that the man who directed the circus was the same man who had directed the circus in 1920.

The circus stories are a thing of the past, and although there have been reports of elephants on the loose in the past, the circus stories are now a thing of the past.
