Political hopeful Scott Leary says he will push for a roundabout to be built at the intersection of Sanford and North roads if elected to State Parliament in March.

Mr Leary, who is running as the Liberal candidate for the Seat of Albany in next year’s State Election, said he was concerned about driver safety at the turn off during peak hour traffic.

"First thing in the morning it’s crazy,” he said.

"The potential for harm is great. A lot of people don’t use the slip lane.”

Albany City Motors Director said locals avoided the contentious intersection because it was dangerous.

"It’s a known hot spot. We avoid this intersection because of the risk involved,” he said.

While the City of Albany is planning to reconstruct Sanford Road this financial year to improve driveability and traffic flow, a roundabout at the North Road intersection is still some time away.

Under a long-term financial plan, City Infrastructure Director Paul Camins said an ‘intersection treatment’ would be built in about five years.

"An intersection treatment has been identified in the Yakamia Structure Plan at the intersection of North Road and Sanford Road and is incorporated into the long-term financial plan,” he said.

"This treatment would likely be a roundabout and facilitate access to the proposed Range Road expansion of the road network, but would also allow more free flowing traffic movements at the existing intersection.”

If elected to the Seat of Albany next year, Mr Leary said he would push for funding from Federal, State and Local governments to get a roundabout built sooner rather than later.

"Long-term they are planning to build one here anyway, so why not bring it forward to keep everyone safe and have a functional road?” he said.

"It restricts customer flow for businesses up and down this road.”

Roundabouts have proved a hot topic in Albany during recent years, with the Chester Pass roundabout voted one of WA’s most dangerous intersections.

Albany is one of the few major residential centres in WA without a set of traffic lights.

Mr Leary, who will face off against Labor candidate Rebecca Stephens and Nationals candidate Delma Baesjou at a March vote, said he didn’t support building traffic lights in Albany.

"I think roundabouts work here,” he said.

HALL RESTORED TO ITS FORMER GLORY

MICHAEL ROBERTS

The usual Easter weekend travel rush that used to see a bumper crowd at Albany’s Town Hall has vanished, with a soft opening planned for December.

Returning the historic civic building to its former glory, restoration and upgrade works started early in the year from the Town Hall into a section of the building open 364 days a year.

The main Town Hall ground floor has been revamped into a multi-purpose gallery space for high-end tourism events, while the spectacular theatre has been restored to its former glory and will be used for public events.

An old asbestos roof has been replaced, while original building features including woodwork, skylights and window frames have been restored.

It’s the first time the circa 1898 heritage building has been renovated since 1983.

Speaking to media after a tour of the restoration works last week, Albany Mayor David Fleay said the Town Hall had been undertaking renovations in previous years.

Mr Wellington said the space also provides the City with an opportunity to have a more diverse programme.

Horse program stalled

EQUINE lovers are being called on to muster up a horse therapy program for people with disabilities running in Albany has hit a roadblock.

Albany woman Leanne Shirley said she was devastated when the Horsepower Bits project had to close down 18 months ago, meaning volunteers either had to travel for the activity or give up completely.

Founded by her mother, Beverley Shirley, the Albany Horsepower Bits project was designed to create opportunities for people with disabilities to participate in horse-riding experiences.

“Anybody that was riding was benefiting from it,” Mrs Shirley said.

“The cost of running the program was ridiculous and I think that sort of thing now and around the world is being cut out.”

Prostate checks vital, not shameful

Mr Horton said he was glad he went for a PSA test after he had been sold a product to try to prevent prostate cancer.

“I wasn’t due for a PSA test, but he didn’t want me to take something I didn’t find useful for it,” he said.

“Mr Horton asked that anyone who has experience with horses might be able to assist.”

Commit to climate

THE Weekender’s Charlene Whitley-Whitebridge’s concern over the climate crisis may be summed up in one word: “catastrophe.”

Charlene is one of many people who believe that the apocalyptic scale of the climate crisis is not being properly communicated. The scale of the climate crisis is such that it is difficult to fully comprehend the extent of the current and future climate impacts.

Recent more concerning announcements are that glaciers may become extinct, that we will hit the point of no return soon, and that there is a 98.5% chance that 2020 will be the hottest year on record. Climate change is not a problem that we can afford to sideline.

Many of our leaders are focused on the political front. Whether it is our politicians or the Australian government, it’s likely they will remain silent on this issue. However, as we know, the Australian government has a long history of ignoring the climate crisis.

The information available to us is often biased and incomplete. The only mystery I am trying to find an answer to is why our leaders have not taken more action on climate change. Perhaps they are too busy with other issues, or they are too afraid to act.

The only way to slow climate change is to reduce carbon emissions. There are many ways to do this, such as by using renewable energy sources, reducing our reliance on fossil fuels, and using public transportation.

We need to act now to avoid the worst impacts of climate change. If we do not act soon, the consequences will be severe. We can still do something about it, but we need to act quickly.

DENMARK is now able to nominate outstanding members of their community for the 2021 Australian Day Council WA Community Citizen Awards.

Four award categories look to seek out locals who have made meaningful contributions to the town, including Community Builder of the Year, Senior Citizen of the Year, and Active Citizenship.

Shire of Denmark Acting CEO Dan Schrader said acknowledging the efforts of the many members of the community who contribute to making Denmark a better place was essential.

“The Community Citizen of the Year Awards are an important way to recognize individuals and organisations making an outstanding community contribution,” he said.

“They are also a fantastic way for our non-community members to thank those who have dedicated their service to our community.

“This year, more than ever, people have gone above and beyond to help support and strengthen the community through COVID-19. Nominations will be awarded with a medal and a certificate at the Shire of Denmark’s Australia Day event on January 26, held at Shoalhead Park.

Nominations close October 31.

Family festival fun

THIS year’s Green Skills Sustainable Community Festival is coming up next weekend and there is something for everyone to do for the entire family.

The Festival begins in the Albany Town Square on September 25 from 11am with a Spiring Twilight Market and Street Food.

The full festival, 9am to 8pm on Saturday, September 26 will spill over into the Alison Hartman Gardens with kids activities including wild identity, fireside storytelling, face painting and Jamie the Clown from 10am.

The Twilight Markets will be full of local and regional small, micro and home-based businesses who have been operating online or all and the festival is a great way to meet your local crafters face-to-face, learn about their products, get your pre-Christmas shopping done early and in the portal system.

We have all seen the slow down in the over-subscribed postal system in these current times and convinces parcels will need to be sent extra early this year.

There will be something for everyone. You can start planning your weekend and learn about improvements to turn your home into a healthier living space.

You can treat yourself to an affordable meal out and support our wonderful local food vendors who have had a low profile in recent months, whilst listening to a busker or two.

Some of the market stalls lined up for the festival include Shale Pottery, Awesome Aboriginal, Billy’s Jewellery, Mong Green and Open Gate Studio.

Food is an important part of the Festival, not only to coordinate restoration and reclamation projects to demonstrate sustainable lifestyles, starting with education and training programs to provide people with the skills to make positive changes to life on a daily basis.

This is another way that people can make positive changes to their daily lives, and those in more remote regional areas.

Then known as the Sustainable Skills Awards, the festival is a great way to meet your local crafters face-to-face, learn about their products, get your Christmas shopping done early and in the postal system.

Workshops showcase sustainability

THIS year’s Green Skills Sustainable Community Festival will be running a workshop tent to showcase ways of living with less waste.

Workshops range from basic cooking and baking skills including weaving with natural fibres, decluttering, making your own nut milks, edible weeds, permaculture Q and A session in the CITATE tent and microgreens by the Gourmet Micro Farmer.

Waste reduction means more household re- duction in the face of quarantines and systems disruption.

Now is the perfect opportunity to make products for yourself and you’ll be ready for the FOGO system rollout.

Limited tickets are available through The Albany Entertainment Centre Box Office or online at albanyentertainment.com.au and cost $22 for adults and $15 for those under 10.

AUSTRALIAN Christian College (ACC) students have taken part in the highly successful ACC Cadets program for many years. Students from Years 7-9 take part in the innovative program, which involves continuous service-based learning experiences, such as emergency preparation, and helps to develop life skills through learning to serve others.

The program is a first step in a program that includes the completion of the Duke of Edinburgh award, an internationally recognised program that values learning new skills, earning the community and developing physical fitness. This award also earns students credit toward their completion of the WACE, and it continues to build life skills.

According to ACC Chap- lain and Abbey alumnus Jason Bresanello, the program was inspired by the recent fires that devastated the eastern states.

"We are aiming to equip our students with practical skills to become citizens who have a head to serve their community,” he said.

"This through serving oth- ers, students can develop their own capacity to build a broad range of skills.

After working with local agencies for many years, Mr Bresanello champions the concept of intentionally supporting students to develop a growth mindset. This includes physical, mental and so- cial challenges that arise through learning to serve others.

The ACC Cadets program is one of the quai programmes of the Duke of Edinburgh Award, an international program that values learning new skills, earning the community and developing physical fitness. This award also earns students credit toward their completion of the WACE, and it continues to build life skills.

Head of Secondary Jade Bresanello said the program was designed to meet the needs of community amongst the junior secondary students. "Our Year 7, 8 and 9 stu- dents are working togeth- er to solve problems and take on new challenges," she said.

"Across the secondary school, we aim to create a culture of empathy, and in- crease our students' view of excellence."

We see the program as essential in equipping stu- dents with the skills needed to lead lives of purpose.

The ACC Cadets program is just one component of a cohesive secondary pro- gram that works to build life skills and resilience. Close to everything, next to nothing

HUDSON Road is quite a quiet street, with houses only on one side and no access through. This makes it a great location for kids and people who like quiet areas close to everything.

The current owners have done a brilliant job in making this home attractive and easy living. It’s hard to believe that such a well-built home can be selling for this price but it isn’t too good to be true.

Features include a new Colorbond roof and external brick wall rendering and the interior is fresh with great design and colour choices really lifting the home and bringing it right into 2020.

Set on 644sqm, because the house is tidy-sized, this leaves quite a bit of room on the level lot to create whatever takes your fancy in the garden. There is already a garden shed and a large shed but room for more. With side access, this could be seen as a great lock n’ leave and you can park the caravan out the back.

In the backyard is a paved area which could easily have a roof added and then you’ve got a great undercover patio.

Inside and the kitchen is neat with gas cooking and good bench space including a breakfast bar. There is the luxury of both a wood-tile fireplace and reverse cycle air-conditioning.

Hudson Road is off Chester Pass Road and is approximately a two-minute drive from Chester Pass Mall and is approximately a two-minute drive from Chester Pass Mall and is approximately a two-minute drive from Chester Pass Mall and is approximately a two-minute drive from Chester Pass Mall and is approximately a two-minute drive from Chester Pass Mall and is approximately a two-minute drive from Chester Pass Mall.

This is a great home for those looking to downsize to something easy to maintain. It’s also great for a single person as the mortgage repayments will be manageable even on a single income. And for investors, look at how the rental income can nearly pay the house off for you.
Double brick family home
This solidly built three bedroom, two bathroom, double brick and tile home is in a nice, quiet location in arguably the most popular street of Mount Barker. The house has a good size formal lounge, a separate dining room plus family room which leads through to the kitchen. Raising the bar on renovations

A WA-invented and created, game-changing building system has been put to use for the first time in Albany for a week.

It is not a common occurrence for a single storey house to be lifted in the air, new storey to be built underneath, but it may be something Great Southern residents will soon be used to.

Matt Pocock of Pocock Building Company uses a story that speaks to him as the future of building, and he wanted it. “I saw it on the news; it was a two-storey house, it’s odd to see the guy that does this,” he said.

“The safety factor is amazing,” Pocock said. “There are being on top of a two-storey home, it’s not great up there. This is great up there. You don’t need to be working at heights, it’s access to areas that can’t get access and the risk of falling.”

The lifting of the Melville Street residence attracted a crowd.

“The safety factor is amazing. I saw it on the news. The future of building, Matt Pocock said.

“We developed it for the eastern states, calls from the eastern states, calls from Leba- and the US,” Mr Jenner said.

“Jenner said. “It has been used for insurance for a single storey to be built un-derneath, but it may be something Great Southern residents will soon be used to.

“If you really want to get away from it all but still tick all the boxes in a home of utter cosiness and style, this one is for you. Positioned midway between thriving Albany and the beautiful forests of Denmark, Torbay Hill offers an absolutely private, superb setting in nature. In close proximity to two major regional centres, world-class swimming, surfing, and fishing beaches, National Parks and more right on your doorstep, the lifestyle on offer here is second to none.

October and will make Albany its sixth stop on a INDIGENOUS Australian dance company Djuki Mala tour.

The dance troupe currently comprises of Baykali Blackwell, an excep- tional slide guitarist, Brank Nu Dae, an exce- ptional slide guitarist, and Blue King Brown. Kuiiti began his career in 1980, playing on various bands and solo projects. The band comprises O’Doherty and Blackwell, along with Peter M, an accomplished percussionist, and John S, a skilled drummer.

MacKintosh bunkered down and recorded demos, in preparation for their next project. "This time also inspired me to begin thinking about music to be played on the boat," MacKintosh said. "The continuing restrictions on numbers has meant that many venues have not welcomed live music.

"Blue Tongue Lizard will perform in the Gold Room at 50 South 56. Tickets available at eventful.com.au".

The Albany Photographic Society

Albany Photographic Society members are now eligible to enter the Albany Photographic Society’s online competition. The competition has three themes: The Weekender, September 17, 2020

The Great Southern Weekender’s Community Notablecontent section is a space for community organisations and individuals to advertise their services and events for free. Eligibility for the advertised organisation/individual must be based on their location in the Great Southern region (renamed Albany region).

The aim is to create a directory of local services, groups, organisations, events or other activities that are available in the Great Southern region and to provide an easy-to-use online platform for local people to access information about what’s happening in their area.

For further information and to be listed, please contact gsw@westernaustralia.com.au or phone 0410 119 149.
Lions, Tigers smash contenders

MICHAEL ROBERTS

LAST season’s top two GSFL teams have joined forces, with North Albany and North Tigers playing to a draw in the 2020 grand final at Albany on Saturday afternoon.

North Albany, who finished as minor premiers after eight wins and one loss, took on North Tigers, who wrapped up the season with four wins and one loss.

North Albany won the coin toss and opted for the second half, which they dominated, with the score of 17-17.

North Albany coach Lisa O’Farrell said she felt better about the game than she did last season’s decider.

Narrikup’s victory propels them to GF

MICHAEL ROBERTS

NARRIKUP have won the third round of the Albany Netball Association Grand Final with a five-goal victory over rivals Royals on Saturday afternoon.

The 51-39 triumph saw a winner-takes-all grand final against Railways on Saturday.

After going out in straight sets in 2019, Narrikup looked to be on the offensive in making this year’s grand final.

Keep your independence at Amaroo

WITH open doors and the welcome mat out, Amaroo Village Albany is ready for new residents to make the move into its independent living villas, according to Amaroo Village CEO, David Fenwick.

“There’s never been a better time. We’ve massively dropped the price on all of our remaining units at our Albany Village. If someone is considering the retirement village lifestyle, it’s a great time to drop in and pay us a visit,” he said.

“There is no substitute for seeing your future home in person. The best way to see the village and get a feel for the whole place is to take a tour with one of our staff. We’ve got a range of different styles and floor plans. There is a tour to fit everyone’s budget, needs and financial situation.”

Amaroo Village Albany currently has a range of brand new and refurbished two and three bedroom villas available ranging from $265,000 to $315,000.

Each home includes a modern kitchen, spacious living and dining areas, built-in wardrobes, privately fenced courtyards, generous storage space, and a lock-up garage.

The village has open hours on Saturday from 1 - 3pm, or tours are available by appointment.

To find out more or to book a village tour, call Geoffrey on 0408 793 173 or visit amaroovillage.com.au.

The COVID-19 pandemic has been an unsettling time for both employers and employees

While employers have borne the brunt of keeping the business afloat, and their employees employed, the national economic downturn has been felt by all. Getting back to pre-pandemic factors that make for a more sustainable work environment, and the employment relationship, such as reduced working hours and work flexibility, has been an ongoing challenge. As a result, many employers have worked with employees to extend their fixed-term contracts, or introduced a new role within the organization. The source and amount of the increase in entitlements will dictate the type of claim an employer may make.

What is casual employment?

- Casual employment is an indefinite period of employment.
- Casual employees are the first to go.
- The nature of the employment relationship involves a proper understanding of each case and not simply what is written in an employment contract.

What can an employee do?

- An employee and employer dispute the nature of the employment relationship (and entitlements), or an employee may make a claim for such entitlements under the National Employment Standards, including paid personal/ carer’s leave, paid public holidays, including if the employee is not granted paid holidays, and casual employment.)

What to do?

- If you cannot resolve your dispute satisfactorily with your former employer, you may wish to consider whether to commence proceedings to appeal Rossato in the High Court.
- It is, therefore, key to ensure that proper processes are followed when terminating an employee’s employment, which involves a proper understanding of each case and not simply what is written in an employment contract.

Santorum 3 Seater

The Santorini sofa strikes a beautiful balance between classic and current. Traditional elements include traditional seating and seatback roll arms, edged for modern flair.
